iddler.

L ENIGHA

ne of the muse a e son of Nepte temple was built were the three dough-I Cete, who had but copie of the Socialitie great decks per-e of the Union. RAVENWOOD. E.

AY BYERING POST. r beather fale, alther's side, sounds, ing bide Europe's strants, ny lands. is heard, ry ; e word, die! world throughout, ot sway, owns about!

T HYENING POST. in dry, in die. in cold. ot in old. ot in black. in tack. n-stay. y every day.

MIDDLETON OBLEM. BYRNING POST. g of two digits, roduct of the sum gives a quotient divided by three cits be inverted, divided by the its into the first, sum of its digits se second. What W. HIRBARD.

EVENING POST. eet and ask him He says if you 3, and add % of ice of the hat. T. TOTTEN.

EVENING POST. aloons in Dixis e they are gen en considered he had so many y unfortunate and in trouble always the be-old an envishe never found is industry, virtue, ning of religion, in the face like a H medW-.ac.

never found is

BILLIE OUR LAST. CAL ENIGNA Yorktown inc. ENIGMA-BLE REBUS-

8. Stepheni nns, Eden, Je-Donop, Welsh, ARADE-Pats

DEACON & PETERSON, PUBLISHERS.

NO. 810 WALNUT STREET, PHILADELPHIA.

TWO DOLLARS A YEAR IN ADVANCE

THREE DOLLARS IF NOT PAID IN ADVANCE.

PSTABLISHED AUGUST-A WHOLE NUMBER

HENRY PETERSON, EDITORS AND PROPRIETORS.

See the Prospectus, on one of the inside eges, of "THE LADY'S FRIEND," a new scine of Literature and Fashion.

HE SATURDAY EVENING POST. TERMS :- CASH IN ADVANCE.

" and one to getter up of ciub, 18,00 " and one to getter up of ciub, 16,00 sery of THE POST and one of THE LADY'S FRIEND,

A SPLENDID PREMIUM .- For the SEWING ACHINE PREMIUM see the Prosp Por $3 we send ARTHUR'S HOME MASARINE and

Any person having sent a Club may add other turns at any time during the year. The pa-ers for a Club may be sent to different Post-affices. Subscribers in British North America must com we have to prepay the U.S. postage on t yivania or other Eastern money. For al wer 85 we prefer drafts on any of the Ea

DEACON & PETERSON, Publisher No. 319 Walnut St., Philadelphia.

WINTER.

FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST. BY T. J. CHAMBERS.

The trees are bare, the ground is white, The inky clouds above me fly Across the leaden, wintry sky, And all is dreary to the sight.

No blooming flower, no waving grass, No singing birds among the trees, No softly scented southern breeze, But chilling north winds hurry past.

Old Winter reigns with ley chain, The little rivulets sing no more; With ice and snow they're covered o'er, While coldly fall the sleet and rain.

Without all, all is bleak and cold, No verdant leaf to cheer the eye, No softly painted azure sky, The scene is mournful to behold.

Within the lights burn cheerfully, The blazing hearth is warm and bright; Ah! yes! within, the wintry night is free from care, from sorrow free.

Then let the cold storms flercely mosn : What need we care, within our home, No cherished one without to roam, For falling snow or north-wind's groan?

Old Winter! thou hast happy hours, Happier, perhaps, than verdant spring Or rosy summer time can bring, With violets and leafy bowers.

Our little home! best place on earth For happiness, unbroken peace-And while the storms without increase, Within are joy, and love, and mirth. yerson's Station, Pa.

OSWALD CRAY.

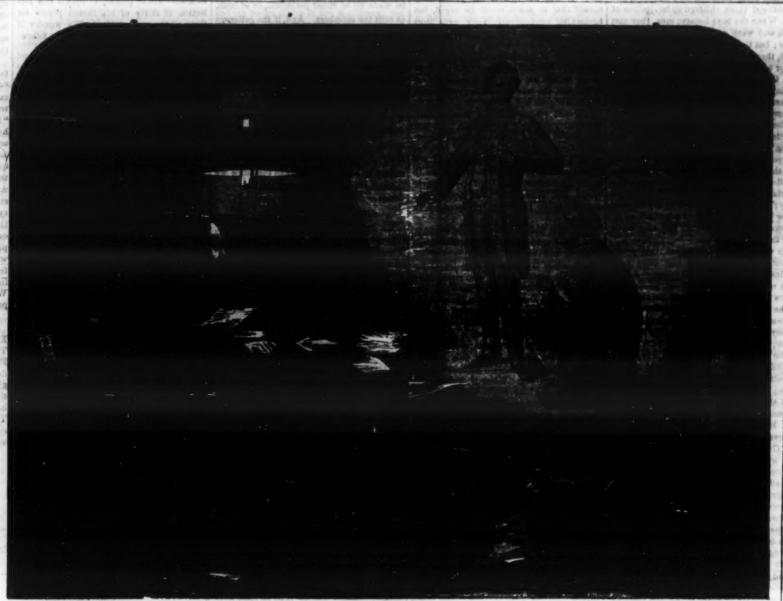

BY MRS. HENRY WOOD. AUTHOR OF "VERNER'S PRIDE," "THI SHADOW OF ASHLYDYATT," "SQUIRE TREVLYN'S HEIR." "THE MYS-TERY," ETC., ETC. Entered according to Act of Congress, in th

year 1864, by Descon & Peterson, in the Clerk's Office of the District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania.1

> PART YI. RETROSPECT.

Of some note in the county, though ex ceedingly poor for their rank, were the Oswalds of Thorndyke. Taorndyke, their country seat, was situated about five miles from Hallingham, and had been generally made the constant residence of the reigning baronet. It was a fine old place; the dyke surrounding it, or dike, as you may like to spell it, from which the place no doubt had partially taken its name, was of remarkable width. It was filled up in the time of Lady Oswald's husband, the third baronet of his name; and fine pleasure-grounds might be seen now, where unwholesome water had once stagnated. Possibly that water had been the remote and unsuspected cause of the dying off of so many of the house's children-as they had died in the old days.

The second barones, Sir Oswald Oswald, lost five children in succession. Two daughters and a son alone lived to grow up: and PHILADELPHIA, SATURDAY, JANUARY 16, 1864.

A VISION OF NEW YEAR'S EVE.

THE INNOCENT PHANTOM OF YOUTH UPBRAIDING THE SORDID PHANTOM OF MATURE AGE.

of Sir Oswald and his wife had those three altogether, brothers, cousins, uncles, and likewise died in infancy; the pain brought nephews, there was a large family of them. to their parents by them might have been less: for pain they all brought in one shape brought her home to Hallingham Abbey, or other. They were self-willed, disobepersisted, and went, in spite of remonthe Oswalds of Thorndyke. To this the most strenuous objection of all was made by Sir Oswald and his lady-in their haughty pride they looked down with utter contempt grounds of their objection, urging that Mr. Cray, though of no particular note, was at fore. least of gentle blood and breeding, and though his means might be small, she deemed them sufficient. It was of no use: she could frocks, and get his sturdy legs into grief, his make no impression on her father and mother, she could not shake their refusal of consent, and she married Mr. Cray without few weeks afterwards. People said she had it. Public opinion on the matter was divided. Some took Miss Oswald's part. She was of an age to judge for herself; being, in fact, no longer very young; and there sppeared no good reason, save that he was not wealthy, for objecting to Mr. Cray. But her family-father, mother, brother, sister-

Mr. Cray had about eight hundred a-year, derivable from money in the funds, and he lived in the Abbey, at Hallingham. The Ozwalds erjoyed some three or four thousand a-year, landed property, and they lived at Thorndyke, and were baronets and very grand. Of course there was a great difference; but some thought the difference might have been got over by Sir Oswald. Some went so far as to say that Mr. Cray, with his ter Oswald Cray. fine, manly person and good conduct, was a And it was so; and when the boy first better man than that shrivelled old lord who entered a noted public school for gentlewas breaking the heart of his poor wife, the | men's sons far away from Hallingham, and younger daughter. Sir Oswald and Lady and her friends never saw her af er : that is, dient; preferring their own ways. The son they never would recognize her. Many a wished to go into the army. His father had the greatest possible aversion to it; but he Thorndyke would drive into Hallingham in their carriage and four-as was the habit strance. The younger daughter, Frances, with some of the county people, -- did they married an old man for his rank. Sir Os- pass her without notice. They would be in wald objected to it: the man's character the close carriage, the old baronet and my her own will and married him. A few short no home now but theirs, opposite to them, months only, and she was back sgain at and they would see Mrs. Cray at the Abbey Thorndyke, driven to take refuge from her | windows, alone or with her husband, as the daughter, Mary, married Mr. Cray, a gen- it, and all the greeting they gave to her was tleman of no account, in comparison with a stony stare. Time went on, and there appeared a baby at her side, a pretty little fellow in long petticoats, held in his nurse's arms. That baby was named Oswald Oswald, and was the Mr. Oswald Cray whom upon Mr. Cray. Miss Oswald disputed the you have seen; but the stare from the baronet's carriage was not less stony than be-

A twelvemonth more, when Oswald could hands into mischief, another child was born, and died. Poor Mrs. Cray died herself grown weak fretting after Thorndyke, after her father and mother, lamenting their hardness, regretting her own disobedience : bu people are prone to talk, and often say things for which there's not a shadow of foundation. She died without having seen her friends, unreconciled; and when Mr. bitterly resented it, and said she had disnot familiar, but giving the details of he death, no answer was accorded him. Mra. Cray, as Mary Oswald, had had a small income is dependent of her father, bequeathed to her by a relative, and this on her death passed to her little son. It was just one hundred and six pounds per year, and she made it her dying request that he should use the surname of Oswald in addition to that of Cray-should be known her ceforth as Mas-

the boys saw him sign his exercises and Oswald could not be brought to see it; none copies "O. Oswald Cray," they asked him were proud also, those present Oswalds of never by so much as a word or a nod recog-

perhaps it had been as well for the peace of the Oswalds could see it: and, take them | what the "O" was for. For his Christian | Thorndyke, and never had spoken to Osname, he answered. Was not Oswald his | wald Cray in their lives. The prejulices Coristian name? they wanted to know, of old Sir Oswald had descended upon them, Mary Oswald married Mr. Cray, and te Yes, his Christian and his surname both, he and Sir Philip and Larly Oswald would pass said, Oswald Oswald. It was his grandpapa's Christian and surname, Sir Oswald with as stony a stere as had ever greeted his Oswald. Oh! was he his grandfather? asked poor mother. the boys. Yes; but-Oswald added in his innate love of truth-he had never been the better for him, Sir Oswald had never spoken to him in his life; there was something unpleasant between him and his papa, he did had to leave Thorndyke, she took on lease not know what. No, at that stage of the the house at Hallingham, and had never rewas of startling notoriety; but Frances took lady, and their daughter Frances, who had boy's age he was unconscious what the moved from it. Her jointure was not a large breach was, or that his dead mother had one; but S.r John had bequeathed to her made it.

Poor Oswald Cray had not had a very her own disposal. These monies were also hustand in her father's home. The elder case might be, for their road took them past happy childhood's life; he scarcely knew being added to yearly, for she did not spend home love. He had never enjoyed them. Lady Oswald would leave a pretty little sum There was a second Mrs. Cray, and a second family, and she did not like the boy Oswald, neft. There was no lack of "somebodies" or care that he should be at home. He was to look out for it, for Lady Oswald had two but four years old when he was despatched nephews with large families, both of whom to a far off preparatory school, where he wanted help badly. One of these nephews, was to stay the holidays as well as the half the Reverend Mr. Suphensor, was a poor years. Now and then, about once in two curate, struggling to bring up his seven chilyears or so, he would be had home for a dren upon one hundred a year. Lady Os just begin to run about in his pretty white fortnight at Christmas, and Mr. Cray would wald sent him a little help now and then; make an occasional journey to see him.

It was at ten years old that he was removed to the public school, where the boys asked him the meaning of the "O." Before that time grief had penetrated to the family of Sir Oswald Oswald. His only son and heir had died in battle in India. His daughter Frances, who had never gone back to the old lord, had died at Thorndyke; and him ever since; to invite him occasionally, Sir Oswald and his wife were childless, Neither survived the year, and when Oswald was not in the nature of Lady Oswald to was eleven years old, and getting to hold his own in the school, the title had devolved on the next brother, Sir John. Sir John was sixty when he came into it, and had no children. He had offended the Oswald family in the same way that Mary Oswald offended them, by marrying a lady whose family was not as good as his own.

That lady was the present widow, Lady innovation of the railway sheds. Sir John Oswald enjoyed the title but four years only, and then it lapsed to a cousin, for Sir John had no children. The cousin, Sir Philip,

Oswall Cray, if by chance they met him,

Perhaps the only one of the whole Oswald family upon whom the prejudices had not descended, was the widow of Sr John. certain monies absolutely, and these were at that was meant by the words, home ties, all her income; so that it was supposed behind her, by which somebody would be but she was not fond of giving away her money. The pride and prejudices of the family had not fallen upon her, and she noticed and welcomed Oswald Cray. He was fifteen when she settled at Hallingham, and she had him to spend his first holidays with her afterwards. She had continued to notice and she was in her way fond of him; but it feel much fondness for any one.

And yet, though not in her inmost heart cherishing the prejudices of the Oswalds, ate did in a degree a lopt them. She could not be independent and brave them off. Conscious that she was looked down upon herself by the Oswalds, she cou'd not feel sufficiently free to take up her own standard of conduct, and fling those prejudices utter-Oswald, now lamenting over the threatened ly to the winds. Upon tolerably good terms with Thorndyke, paying it occasional state visits, and receiving state visits from it in return, she did not openly defy all Thorndyke's prejudices. Though she acknowenjoyed it still and lived at Thorndyke, and ledged Oswald Cray as a relative, received his eldest son would succeed him. They him as an equal, there it ended, and she walds generally, who deemed everybody were proud also, those present Oswalds of never by so much as a word or a nod recog-beneath them; it was rather that pride of

Mr. Cray of the Abbey was of note in the town; Mr. Cray was courted and lected up to; Mr. Cray went to disser-parties, and gave them; Mr. Cray's wife was fashionable and extrawagant, and so were Mr. Cray's daughters; and altogether Mr. Cray was a great man, and spent thousands where he ought to have spent thousands where he ought to have spent hundreds.

He had four children, not counting Onewald. Marcus and three daughters, and M cost something to bring them out in the world. Marcus, changeable and vaneficing by nature, fixed upon half-a-dosen prefessions or occupations for himself, between he decided upon the one he finally embraced—that of a doctor. Chance, more Mr. Cray of the Abbey was of note in the braced—that of a doctor. Chance, more than anything else, caused him to decide on this at last. Altogether, what with home extravagance and the cost of his children, Mr. Cray became an embarrassed man; and when he died, about two years previous to the opening of this story, a very alender support was left to his wife and daughters. His will did not even mention Oswald. Two or three hundred pounds were left to Marcus—the rest to Mrs. Cray, for her life, and to go to her daughters afterwards.

Oswald had not expected any. Where a home gives no affection it is not very likely to give money. When Oswald had come of age he found that his own income, of which his father was trustee, had not only been spent upon his education, but the principal had been very considerably drawn upon an well—in fact, it would take years to redom: it. "I was obliged to do it, Oswald," his father said. "I could not limit your educational expenses, and there was the heavy premium to pay in Parliament street. Pd willingly have paid all cost myself; but it has not been in my power."

Oswald was not ungenerous. He grasped his father's hand and warmly thanked him, saying it was only right his own money should pay his cost when there were so many at home to educate. Ah, it was not the money he regretted. Had every sixpence of it been spent-why, it was spent—he was young and strong, with a good profession before him, and brains and hands to work it, he could make his own Upon the death of her husband, when she way in the world, and he should make it. No, it was not the money; but what Oe-wald had been hurt at, was the manner in which they had estranged him from his home; had kept him from the father's sifection which he had yearned for. He knew that the fault had been Mrs. Cray's : that his father held him aloof only under her influence. He did not allow him he could not help thinking that were he ever placed in a similar situation, he should openly love and cherish his first born son, in spite of all the second wives in the world. Oswald had yet to learn by experience how utterly futile is that boast which we are all apt to make—that we should act so differently in other people's places. Never was there a truer aphorism than the homely saying: "Nobody knows where the shoe pinches save those who wear it."

Oswald Cray had been born proud: it might be detected in every tone of his decisive voice, in every turn of his well-set head, in every lineament of his haughty features. He could not help it. It is well to repeat this assertion, because pride is sometimes looked upon as a failing demanding heavy reproach. There it was, and he could not shake it out of him, any more than he could shake out his other qualities or feelings. It was discerned in him when a little child; it was seen conspicuously in his school-days; it reigned paramount in his early manhood. "The boy has the proud spirit of his grandfather, Sir Oswald," quoth the gossips; and no doubt it was from that quarter that it had come. Only in his later days, those years between twenty and thirty, when thought and experience were coming to him, did it grow less observable, for he had the good sense to endeavor to keep it in due subjection.

But it was not a bad sort of pride, after all. It was not the foolish pride of the Os-

He was not proud of his family descent rom the Oseralda. Quite the contrary. He send no casso to pride himself on either the Cowalds or the Crays. So far as the Cowalds went, many a hundred times had he wished they were no connections of his. All his his he had received from them nothing but slights—and alights to a man of Cowald Cray's hungaryment bring the down. est mortification. He knew now how they had treated his mother; he falt to his very heart how they despised himself. If he could have changed his deal of the could have changed his deal of th changed his dead grandfather dy cles, a little less foolish and a great deal iese grand, he had been be very isolation from his mother's hasfly had tended to foster his own pride nation which it induced had for ared it-just as the isolation from his ow om his father, and the second famihad contributed to render him self it is not your home-darling, bred up in find dependence, sheltered from the d's storms as a hot-bouse flower, becomes the self-reliant man, but he who is sent out early to rough it, who has dy to care for him, or to love him, in all the wide earth.

Not a more self-reliant man lived than Oswald Cray. He was sure, under God, of of, of his good conduct; and I think it out the best surety that a man or woman can earry with them through life. In ments of doubt, perplexity, difficulty, r might be its nature, he turned to art and took its counsel-and it never falled him. It was with himself he liberated; it was his own good judgnt, his right feeling that he called to his He had an honest, upright nature, was strictly honorable: a proud man, if it is the oper sors of pride, nearly always is so. His ambition was great, but not extravagant; it did not soar him aloft in flights of fancy, vain, generally speaking, as they are He was determined to rise to the summit of his profession—that of a civil enginear, but he entertained no foolish dreams heyond it. To attain to that, he would use every diligence, every effort, consistent with see and honor: and dishonorable fforts Oswald Oray would have acornec use, would have shaken them from him as he abook a summer-day's dust from his

He was connected with a firm of high repute in Parliament Street: Bracknell and Street. Oswald Cray was a partner, but his name did not appear as yet: and, as you may readily imagine, the lion's share of the profits did not fall to him. In fact, he had entered it very much as his half-brother had entered the house of Dr. Davenal-to obtain a footing. For more substantial recompense he was content to wait. Bracknell and Street were engineers to the Hallingham line, and to Oswald Cray had been entrusted its working and managen

He had said to Lady Oswald, in answer to her reprosed of his not calling to see her more frequently, that his time when at Hallingham was so occupied. True, so far : but the chief and real motive which kept him from her house was a sort of sensitive (ve)ing relating to her money. It was not that he dreaded people's saying he was looking after it: he would have scorned that kind of reach: but he did dread lest any degree of intimacy, any pushing of himself in her way, should couse her to leave it to his you will quite understand this; understand him or his feeling. None but a man of the nicest honor, who was entrenched, as it were, in his own pride, the rectitude, could have felt this delieacy. He did not want Lady Oswald's money; he knew that he had no claim upon any of it, no right to it, and he would not put himself in her way more than he could help, even as a passing visitor. Gossipleg Hallingham had said, " My lady would be leaving her nest-egg to Mr. Oswald Cray." The goesip had penetrated to Mr. Oswald Cray's cars, and his only notice of it was a haughty re of sontempt; but in all probability it tended to increase his dislike to appear at Lady Oswald's. During these business visits to Hallingham, he sajourned at a respect-able inst of the old school, a little beyond town and the Abbey Gardens, called Apple Tree, and had recently become imate with the family of Dr. Dave on forth all his life from his father owed to enter it but at rare intervale, and then as a formally fevited guest, it ment he supposed that Oswald Cray enstrong affection for his half-scale and electric Sack a state of things wild have been uncatural, quite in oppo-tion to ordinary probabilities. It would wrong to my that they disliked each was certainly no love: nee may best express the feeling. Maron, the eldest child of the second Mrs. Crag, was from these to four years younger than Oswald. It had been better that Mrs. Cray had fostered an affection better that Mrs. Cray had fostered an affection between these boys, but she did just the reperso. She resented the contempt cost on her husband by the Oswalds of Thorndyke; she reseated, most unreasonably, the fact most unreasonably, the fact that the little money of the first Mrs. Cray ended at once to Oswald; she even recented the child's having taken the distinguishing name: he was Oswald Cray, her son plain Cray. How worse than solish this was of her, how wrong, perhaps he woman might yet learn: but altogethe it did excite her against Oswald, and she kept him aloof from her own children, and suraged those children to be jealous of him. When the boys became men, they men often, and were cordial enough with each other; but there was no feeling of brotherhood, there never could be any.

For a twelvemouth after Mr. Cray's death, Mrs. Cray remained at the Abbey, and then she left is. It was too expensive a residence for her now—its rent swallowing up half her for her now—its rest swallowing up half her income. She removed to a watering-place in Wales with her daughters, where, as she facetiously said, she hoped they should "get along." Marcus, who had qualified for a surgeon, became assistant to Dr. Davenal, and that gentleman at length gave him a small shape in the modits. It was not a and that gentleman at length gave him a small share is the profits. It was not a regularly constituted firm—"Davenal & Cray;" nothing of the sort. Hallingham knew that he was admitted a partner, so far as receiving a share went; and they knew that that was all.

He was liked in Hallingham, this you doctor, and Dr. Davenal had done it in kindness, to give him a standing. As the time went on, he would have no doubt a larger and larger share, some time succeed to the whole. He was considered a suitable partner for the doctor; the Crays of the Abbey had always been looked up to in the town; and young Cray's skill as a doctor was in the accordant. Lady Oswald was getting to like him very much, she evinced a dealry. to patronise him, to push forward his intereets; and Dr. Davenal was really in hope that she would adopt him as her medio ident for every-day calls instead of himself. Mr. Cray could spare the time for these useless visits better than Dr. Davenal. He, Mr. Cray, resided in lodgings in the town, and was growing in its favor daily in a profeerional point of view : not that he had displayed any unusual skill, but simply that Hallingham gave him credit for pos it, because they liked him,

There was a large family of the Davenals as there was of the Oswalds speaking in both cases of the days gone by, and comprising collateral branches. Years and years ago Surgeon Davenal had been a neted name in Hallingham; he had a large practice, and he had several children. It is not necessary to speak of all the children. Richard (the present Dr. Davenal) was the eldest son, and had succeeded to the practice. The two other sons, Walter and John had chosen to enter the Church, and both when ordained, had gone out to the Wes Indies; one of them became chaplain to the Bishop of Barbadoes, the other obtained a church in the island. Both had married there, and Caroline Davenal was the only child of Walter, the elder of the two.

Sara was twelve years old when her cou sin Caroline arrived, an orphan: father and mother were both dead. A poor clergyman in the West Indies, dying young, was not likely to have amazed money, and the little child, Oaroline, had literally nothing Her father wrote an appealing letter to his brother Richard on his death-bed, and

Richard Davenal was not one to reject it. "She shall be my child henceforth, and Sara's sister," said he, is the warmth of his heart, when the letter and the child arrived at Hallingham. And so she had been.

But it was by no means so certain that Caroline Davenal would not some very large sum of money was pending in her mother's family, who were West Indiana. It had become the subject of dispute, of litigation, and was at length thrown into that formidable court in England-Chancery. Should it be decided in one way, Caroline would derive no benefit; if in another, she would come in for several thousand pounds. The probabilities were in her favor-but Chancery, as you all know, is a capricious cour, and does not harry itself to inconvenience

Upon the death of Dr. Davenal's wife, his deter Bettins came to reside with him, and to rule his children. He had but three: Richard, Edward, and Sara. There had been others between Edward and Sara, but they died young. Pine lads, those of Dr Davenal, although they took to plaguing stern Miss Bettina, and aggravatingly called her "Aunt Bett." Fine young men, too, they grew up, well reared, liberally educated. Richard embraced his father's profession; for Edward, a commission in the army was purchased in accordance with his strong with, and he was now Captain Davenal.

And Rebard Davenal, the eldest son. where was he? Ah! It was a grievous story to look back upon. It had clouded the life of Dr. Davenal, and would cloud it to the end. Richard was dead, and Dr. Davesal placed bimself as the remote cause.

When Richard had completed his studies and passed the College of Surgeons, he re-turned to Hallingham, and joined his father but beautiful within.

in practice, as it had been intended that he should. He grow greatly in favor; he premised to be as clever as his faster; Ealing. tive presence, genial manners, and he mize a great deal of pleasure with his life of work. Dr. Dayenal spoke to him seriously and kindly. He said that too manie sure did not agree long with work, could not agree with it, and he begged him to be more steady. Richard laughed, and said he would. A short while, and startling news reached the ears of Dr. Davenal, that Richard was thinking of marrying one who was undesirable. Richard, his fine boy, of whom he was so fond and proud, marry Aer! It was not against the young lady herself that so much could be urged, but against her connections. They were most nable. Dr. Davenal pointed out to Richard that to wed this girl would be as a blight upon his prospects, a blow to his re-putation. Richard could not be brought to see it; though not quite equal to themselves in position, she was respectable, he mid, and her connections had nothing to do with it, he did not marry them, he married her The feud continued; not an open feud, you understand, but an under current of opposition, of coolness. 'Richard would not give up his project, and Dr. Davenal would not view it with anything but aversion. As to giving his consent, that Dr. Davenal never would, and Richard, hitherto dutiful, not one to go the length of marrying in

It was at this time; or a little before it that the dispute had arisen in Barbadoer louching the money already spoken of Particulars of it were written to Dr. Davenal by his brother John, explaining also how Caroline's interests were involved. He, the Rev. John Davenal, said in the same letter that he was anxious to send his two little boys to Europe for their education and was waiting to find them a fit escort he did not care to trust them alone in the ship. As Dr. Davenal read this letter, a en thought darted into his mind like a flash of lightning. What if he sent out Richard? Richard could aift the details about this fortune, could, if expedient, urge Caroline's interests; he could bring back the two little beys, and-and-the thought of all lay behind-it might break off the engagement with the young girl here, Fanny Parrack! Quite a glow of satisfaction came over Dr. Davenal's face at the thought.

He sought a conference with his son. He told him that he wished him to take a voyage to Barbadoes; that Caroline's interests required somebody to go out; that the two little boys had no friend to bring them over. Richard hesitated. To most young men a visit to the West Indies would be a welcome distraction; but Richard Davenal semed strangely to hold back from it-to shrink from its very meation. Did some mysterious warning of what it would bring forth for him dart unconsciously across his spirit? Or did he fear that it might in some way lead to his losing the young lady upon whom he had set his heart? It cannot be known. Certain it was, remembered, oh, how remembered afterwards, that an unaccountable repugnance on Richard's part did evince itself, and it was only to the persist ent urgent persuasion of Dr. Davenal that he at length yielded. He yielded, as it were, under protest, and he said he did, sacrificing his own strong wishes against it to his

He set sail, and he wrote on his arrival at Barbadoes, after a fine passage; and the next letter they received, a fortnight af erwards, was not from him, but from his uncle, the clergyman. Richard had died of

It seemed to turn the current of Dr. Davenal's life. He blamed himseif as the cause: but for his scheming-and in that moment of exaggerated feeling, of intense grief, he called it scheming-Richard, his best beloved son, would be still by his side to bless him. He had never been a scheming man, but an open and straigh forward one; and never, so long as he lived, would he scheme again. In his unhappiness, he began to reproach himself for having needlessly opposed Richard's marriage-to believe that he might have done worse than in marrying Fanny Parrack. He sent for her, and he found her a pretty, modest, gentle girl, and his repentance heaped itself upon him fourfold. He informed her very kindly and considerately of the unhappy fact of Richard's death, and he told her the should any memento be found left for her amidst Richard's effects when they arrived -any letter, no matter what, it should be given to her.

But that death had changed Dr. Davene into an old man; in the two years which had elapsed since, he had aged too, both in looks and constitution. No wonder that a spasm of pain came over his fact when Mr. Oray asked him whether he should forbid Caroline to him. You can understand his answer now: "So long as I live, I shall never 'forbid' a marriage to any over whom I hold control:" and you can understand the anguish of the tone in which it was

And that ends the chapter of retrospect. (TO BE CONTINUED.)

83 Some men are like gardens en by rough stone walls-unsightly without,

Henry Peterson, Editor.

PHILADELPHIA, SATURDAY, JAPART 16, 1864

RESERVED CONCREDITIONS—We cannot undertake to return rejected communications our fewing-Machine Premium.

In answer to various letters, we would repeat that as to our clubs generally, they can be made up of either periodical, or of both, as suits the members. And, if the getter up of a club for Tax Poer prefers the Magasine as a Premium, he can have it; while TER POST will be sent as a Premium for the Magazine clubs, if desired.

The Sewing-Machine Premium, it will b soes, applies to both periodicals; as well as to mixed clube made up of the magazine and the paper. This is a splendid promiand we are glad to see that numbers design availing themselves of it. These machines cannot be bought for less than the price we mention, PORTY-FIVE DOLLARS!

THAT ADDRESS.

Mr. J. McDuffle, of Cambridgeport, Mass informs us that the New Year's Address for Twenty-Eight and Twenty-Nine, republi ed in THE Post of Jan. 2, was write the English post Prued, and is to be for in the volume published some years ago by Apropos to this, we notice that an authorized edition of Praced's poems is soon to be published in Eegland. The American edition, above alluded to, was unauthorized in the sense that the poems were collected together-we think by Mr. Griswoldmerely on the strength of their general re-semblance, and offer without any certain knowledge that they were written by Praed. It is honorable to the postical perception of this country, that the first and only collection as yet published of the works of this witty and charming writer, was issued or this side of the Atlantic. And this is by no means the only case in which the American recognition of the genius of an English writer, has preceded the home one. The case of Thomas Carlyle is a very strong instance of this quick American perception of what is true and what is false metal in the foreign coinage. Carlyle was highly valued by the literary classes of the United States, when the same classes in England could find little in him save what was ridiculous. At present, we judge he occupies a much higher literary position abroad than he does here. He has simply disgusted his old friends with his brutality of thought-that is all.

DEMPSTER.

Mr. Dempeter writes us that he designs visiting Philadelphia in a abort time, for the purpose of giving a Farewell Musical Eutertainment prior to his return to his native land. We notice that in New York a Farewell Entertainment was given by him, at the request of a number of distinguished gentlemen, including the poet Bryant, the his torin Bancroft, the Rev. Drs. Prime, Mublenberg, Geer and Bellows, Parke Godwin, Lewis Gaylord Clark, &c.

NEWSPAPERS.

THE COMMERCIAL LIST of this city, under be management of its publisher, Mr. S. N. Winslow, has undergone various improve

THE EVENING TELEGRAPI sper, just commenced in this city by Mr. J. Barciay Harding. It has our best wishes for i s success.

THE NATIONAL GUARD has been purchased by Mr. Wm. Moran, who announces that he intends to make some improvementa.

THE UNION BANNER is the name of a new and well-file I weekly, recently commenced

THE REWARD OF MERIT. The following amusing anecdo:a, showing how luck sometimes receives the reward to which merit only is entitled, is from a foreign journal:-In one of the chief government offices a

In one of the chief government offices at Para, there was a clerk who, on the last day of each month, the pay-day, accupationally drew up the account of his month's exp nditure: so much for Indging, so much for fisod, so much for this, so much for that, well, but, he said, "I have forgotten myfisor', so much for this, so much for that, "Well, but," he said, "I have forgotten myself. What remains for me after I have allouted this money. Nothing at all." By my faith, the other claimants must be content the swept into his pocket all the little parcels of money which he had prepared. Every month had the same commencement. This mode of proceeding brought him at last into debt on every side, and the law. This mode of proceeding through him at last into debt on every side, and the law. officer was always at his heels. To escape gentiemen of this sort he, at last, never left the office at all. In the evening he made himself philosophically in a large arm-chair. He thus carried on war with his fice on acceptable. On one occasion, the head of the department returning home rather late saw a solitary and unaccustomed light at a window of the office. He was a man who appreciated and applauded real.

coal and candle of the government. How minister, with a very gracious air, and exemplary assistant account of the government and minister, with a very gracious air, and exemplary assistant account of the government in the property of the and exemplary assiduiry, he intended to give him three months' pay!

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

THIRTY PORMS WILLIAM CULLEN BRYANT. Published by Appleton & Co., New York; and for sale by Ashmed & Evans, Philadelphia. The admirers of Bryant and who is not enrolled among their number-will be pleased to obtain this collection of thirty of his recent poems for their sitting rood tables. We wonder if many of our readers have seen the follow-

ROBERT OF LINCOLN. Merrily swinging on briar and weed Moor to the nest of his little da For the mountain-side or mead, Robert of Lincoln is telting his ne Bob-o'-link, bob-o'-link, Spink, speak, spink; Song and safe is that nest of ours, Hidden among the summer flowers Chee, chee, chee Robert of Lincoln is gaily drest,

Wearing a bright black weddi White are his shoulders and white his creek Hear him ca'l in his merry note:
Bob-o'link, bob-o'link, Spink, spank, spink; ook, what a nice new cost is mine, sure there was never a bird so fine. Chee, chee, che art of Lincoln's Quaker wife, Pretty and quiet, with plain brown wings assing at home a patient life, Broods in the grass while her hu Bob o'-link, bob-o'-link, Spink, spank, spink; Brood, kind creature; you need not fear Thieves and robbers while I am here.

Chee, chee, chee. fodest and sby as a nun is she; One weak chirp is her only note. Braggart and prince of braggarts is he, Pouring boasts from his little throat Bob-o'-link, bob-o'-link, Spink, spank, spink; Never was I afraid of man; Catch me, cowardly knaves, if you can Chee, chee, chee.

Six white eggs on a bed of hay, Flecked with purple, a pretty aight ! There as the mother sits all day, Robert is singing with all his might : Bob-o'-link, bob o'-link, Spink, spank, spink ; Nice, good wife, that never goes out, Keeping house while I frolic about.

oon as the little ones chip the shell, Six wide mouths are open for food; Robert of Lincoln bestirs him well, Gathering seeds for the hungry brood. Bob o'-link, bob-o'-link, Spink, spank, spink; This new life is likely to be Hard for a gay young fellow like me.

Chee, chee, chee Robert of Liecoln at length is made Sober with work and silent with care;

Off is his holiday garment laid, Half forgotten that merry air, Bob-o'-link, bob-o'-link, Spink, spank, spink ; Nobody knows but my mate and I Where our nest and our nestlings lie Chee, chee, chee,

Summer wance; the children are grown; Fun and frolic no more he knows; Off he flies, and we sig as he goes: a humdrum crope: Bob-o'-link, bob o'link, Spink, spank, spink; When you can pipe that merry old strain, Robert of Lincoln, come back again. Chee, chee, chee

WAS HESUCCESSFUL? A NOVEL BY RICHARD B. KIMBALL, author of "Saint Leoger," "Undercurrents," "Romance of Sundent Life," &c. Carleton, publisher, New York. Por saie by J. B. Lippincott & Co., Philada. The interest of this book and the impree-

sion of ability which it creates are due less to its literary excellence, which in many respects is not beyond criticism,—than to its excellent moral and the shrewdness with which its author judges of character and motives The course of Hiram Meeker's life, from his seemingly praiseworthy and "eminently moral and religious" youth, to his unlovely and unhonered age is full of interes. If a little overdrawn, its lesson is none the less a direct and intelligible one. His mother, whose character moulds and trains his own, is described as "an excellent manager, a pattern wife and mother, and a devotedly pions woman," (plety being here understood to mean what Henry James calls " religiosity," form, not substance, doctrine, not if e,) and walks her round of life with no doubt of her own perfections, no suspicion of the gnawing worm of inordinate selfbood at the root of all these seeming virtues, " Whatever she did was from a s-ree of dety-and she did her duty be cause it was the way to prosperity and heayen" Her son's character is the same, exJoul Burns affords the appropriate at the Higher Meeter, showing that the an active and proposess man of back as active and proposess man of back as active affording the means of largest to man to those about him.

THE SHADOW OF ASSILVEDTAY. By Mrs. IN WOOD, author of "Squire Traviya" Environment Pride," "The Channings," "I have the Heirs," &c., &c. Printed from the thor's manuscript and advance proceed from Mrs. Heary Wood, and here in edwace of the publication of work in Europe, by T. B. Polerson & Brain Philadelphia.

Mrs. Wood's novels are so thorough a cured in the favor and appreciation of a public, that any special criticism of the style and merit is unneeded now. The immense, their almost unequalled possible to the contract of the contract larity with nearly all classes of random, his sufficient testimony to their power and a

The admirers of Mrs. Wood will find a falling off in this recent work from her falling off Ashlydyat" has a fall of the Shadow of Ashlydyat. casy flow, all the interest of plot that the readers have found in "The Channings" Squire Trevlya's Heir," and the other of the channel of th "Squire Trevlya's Heir," and have pre-her works which our columns have pre-sented to them. This work, indeed, will sented to them. This work, indeed, will quence of the element of the supermitted that pervades it in the wierd Shadow of Ashlydyst, whose mysteries the anth sures us have been witnessed by her and eyes. Of the many characters that eali the story the only thoroughly disagressitione is the hero, "handsome George Goods" phin," whose weakness grows into her wickedness. Charlotte Pain, on the co from an abominably designing girl, impaint into a good-humored, amoning scatter-had We recommend this novel as heartily as is predecessors to our circle of readers

SECRESION, OR PROSE IN RHYME, AND EAST TENNESSEE, A PORM. By an EAST TENNESSEEAN. Printed for the Author. For sale by J. B. Lippincott & Co., Phile delphia. The author, in this little volume. gives an Eas; Tennessecan's idea of sees sion, and alludes to the great barbarities inflicted upon the noble people of East Tennessee by the rebel authorities. The opening of the poem on East Tenner well written. We quote a specimen:

East Tennessee! secluded laud Of gentle hills and mountains grand, Where healthful breezes ever blow, And coolest springs and rivers flow; Where yellow wheat and waving corn Are liberal poured from plenty's horn, Land of the valley and the glen, Of lovely maids and stalwart men; Thy gorgeous succets well may vie In splendor with Italian sky; For, gayest colors deck the clouds, As night the dying sun enshrouds And heaven itself doth wide unfold Its drapery of blue and gold, And, pil owed in the rosy air, The scraphs well might gather there, And, in the rainbow tinted West, Be lulled by their own sengs to rest!

you

had peac

Ascer

threv

obbe

Ah

happy

weep

many

forgo

" Gad

never realiz

Ellan

excite

as the hours

at the before

Biddo

dulate

that s

au blin

in silv

Jew:

rine

solem

cruel

Bat

hood

The b ed tre

the ti

RECOL

his w hold

or will tall to yet his according to hos host boyle boy, whang be saithe 1 senti:

But

by; a its or is left burie

PELAGO: AN EPIC OF THE OLDEN MOOR-BH TIME. By ELIZABETH T. PORTER BRACH. For sale by J. B Lippincott & Co. Philads. Published by Appleton & Co., New York. This volume contains over 400 pages, and is got up in beautiful style, with tinted paper, excellent print, and well-execute wood engravings, illustrative of the text The poem is a story of the early history of Spain, which is told in octo-syllabic In glancing through the volume, the following lines struck us as a favorable spe of the author's powers:

"The silvery moon ascending now, Serencly shines on mount th placid beam o'er heats and grove, Where happy lovers fondly rove; Through leafy bowers and vale she played In mazy freecoed light and abade; Through the dense chestnut foliage gray, In glowings soft of mellow ray, That dancing o'er toe rippling stream, On Deva's bosom glistening beam, And bathe Anseva's cloud-klased height In full, resplendent glory bright."

BATTLE FIELDS OF THE SOUTH, From Bull Run to Fredericks urgh; with Sketches of Confederate Commanders, and Gossip of the Camps By an English Combs Lieutenant of Artillery on the Field Staff With two Maps. Published by John Bradburn, New York; and for sale by J. B. Lippincott & Co. Pailadelphia.

THE COLOR GUARD: Being a Corporal's Notes of Military Services in the Ninetee Army Corps. By JANES K. HOSMER, of the 52nd Massachusetts V.dustoers. Publis by Walker, Wise & Ca, Boston; and for sale by J. B. Lippincets & Co., Philadel-

GAMES -The New Historical Game, and Mr. and Mrs. Joliyboy's Picnic, are the titles of two games for children, sent us by Mesars. Fisher & Bro her, Philadelphia and Baltimore.

II is a curious feet that in secred histery, the age, deato, and burial of only one woman, Saran, the wife of Abraham, is noted. Women's are ever since appears not to have been a su j es for history or aggerated and masculleiged by the qualities man sava, "He never smiles but he feels developed in his numerous love affairs.

One sold winter's night my friend Diedrick Meerschaum and myself were sitting, as is our custom, before the blasing grate of my private chamber, he engaged with his oved pipe, and I deep in meditation. saddenly breaking the silence, I said, "Diedrick, sing for me that sweet song which charmed me so the other even o thoroughy a preciation of the citicism of the ed now. The equalled popular of reader, his ood will find a k from her pents have repents have pents have pent

the author and by her see rs that calling ly dingressible George Godd is into hearths.

n the country; girl, impress

By an East

& Co., Phile-

little volume, idea of second at barbarities

ple of East

orities. The Tennesses is cimen:

s grand,

blow, s flow;

ing corn

y's horn,

men ;

y vie

ouds,

there,

o rest!

DEN MOOR-

T. Ponta

ncott & Co.

& Co., New

r 400 pages, with tinted

ell-execute

of the text

history of labic verse.

the follow-

specimen

grove,

e played

cam,

height

TH, From

h Sketche

Gossip of ield Staff.

ohn Brad

J. B. Lip-

Corporal's

ER, of the

Published

and for

Philadel-

ame, and are the ont us by

only one cham, is appears

inetee

d

And Diedrick, laying saids his pipe sang in a soft tenor an Indian legends ballad, which told of the winged messes ger sout to the happy hunting-grounds, laden with the sighs of an aged mother, who as yet lingered on the confines of ex-istence. As the last notes died away, the volumes of smoke began to rice again from Diedrick's mouth, and to curl in fan tastic wreaths near the ceiling. As the fre-light flickered and danced over my friend's handsome face, who set phiegen-tically puffing at his "furnace," I began to discourse as follows:—
"Diedrick, best of listeners and truest of friends, the sweet tones of your voice have fallen on my spirit like the gentle April showers on infant vegetation, irrigating, refreshing, and seothing all nature. And, Diedrick, your song has awakened many secollections of the past; its magnetic influence has drawn out old thoughts, rusty and so long since laid aside that their ex-istence was forgotten; and in their train some joy and grief, in strange companion-ship. It has led me to think of the various songs of life. When the helpless infant lies in its me ther's bosom, its fretted spirit is ealmed by her plaintive lullaby. Low and simple are strains, but the infant nature yields to their influence, the little eyelids close over the orbs of vision, and the child sleeps.-Sleeps on its mother's breast secure from harm; sleeps on the fountain of its life, sheered by the melody of a voice. Or it may be that on the lap of some wrinkled nurse, some Meg Merrilles of everyday life, the bonnie bairn aits gazing with his large blue eyes, as he lists to the wonderous tales of fairy or haunted lands; and the ballad, which the crone chants to his infant ear, follows him throughout his life. Do you not remember the story of the mother, who, when she in vain tried to distinguish among a group of children rescued from Indian captivity, the babe who was snatched from her own breast, with a heart besting with anxiety, and a voice choking with emotion, sang the lullaby with which she had soothed that babe, in days gone by, to peaceful alumber? And lot as the notes ascended, a child rushed from the group, threw herself into the singer's arms, and sobbed out-" Mother."

Ah, what a joy was there! Did not that happy mother thank the Almighty for the power of melody? Again, did we not weep together, my boy, at the theatre, not many months ago, when we witnessed the heir of Ellangowan forced to recall longforgotten incidents by the sweet accents of Gadil gu lo." Did you not then realize, if never before, the intensity of the Cashman's realization of the character of the Gipsy of Ellangowan? In a voice trembling with excitement and cracked by age, yet sweet as the sighing of an Æolian harp, uncouth in dress, tottering in step, and wierd in appearance, she sings the plaintive lay.— Slowly approaching the bewildered Betram, with every note and every step she recalls some childish recollection, until the placid hours at Ellangowas, and the fearful scene at the Gauger's Soup stand in bold relief before him. In no situation did the modern Siddons cause such a thrill of delight to undulate through my veins as when she sang that simple lay; not even when in fearful sublimity she snatches the bloody daggers from the trembling thene; not even when in silvery tones she enjoins mercy upon the Jew; sye, not even when as Queen Catharine she calmly expires to the strains of solemn symphony; or as Nancy Sykes, meets a horrible death in the arms of her cruel paramour.

But the melodies which charmed in childhood have but little attractions to the boy. The boisterous urchin in his as yet unchanged treble gayly shouts the favorite ballads of the time, beating an accompaniment on such uncouth instruments as may chance to be in his way, extemporizing that useful household article, a tin pail, into a kettle-drum, or with rough eastanets producing a dia fatal to sensitive nerves. Of harmony he as yet knows nothing, and of time still less, but his acute car guides him where else his ignorance would bewilder; and his clarion song is not always intelerable. The music of boyhood corresponds with the nature of the boy. God ferbid that either should be thanged; that the fresh young heart should be saddened prematurely into formality, or the loud young veice be softened into the sentimental tenor or deep bass of advanced demic dignity. And with this transforms- the tears which gush thence.

tion from the school boy to the collegian, the voice and its music likewise change.— His tenor voice sings bravely in the chorus or perhaps coosiously life itself is as ambitious solo. "Benny Havens," "Upidee," "Lauriger,"—now disgraced by the words of "My Maryland,"—become familiar to him; though I doubt if he can readily translate their text. Sweet, my boy, are these good old tunes to my ear, sweet at any time or place, but doubly sweet when sung by the students at my own Alma Mater. As I pay my yearly visit to that dear old spot and gase upon the hausts which I once frequented, I feel as if I were a neophyte again, standing tremblingly at the threshold of the temple. And as I have sat on the banks of that loved river, which washes the college "sompus," the sounds of "Lauriger' have often been borne gently across the wa nave orem been borne gently across the wa-ter to my ear from distant barges, freighted with gay undergraduates, the stroke of the oars, and the murmuring of the stream as it rippled along its circuitous channel, forming an accompaniment beautiful and appro-priate to the chorus of voices of my succes-sors in the first stretch of the journey of life. Again I seem to hear it, "Lauries Horathis, quam disisti serum." Sing on, happy hearts, live on in your friendships; no sharp discord disturbs the harmony of your lives, but only a few nicely modulated tones vary the monotony of your daily tasks, and enhance the pleasures that ensue.

Commencement day arrives, with its bitter-sweet compendium of joy and grief; the water-ahed of life whence no stream flows back through the happy valleys of youth, and another guakes on through the rugged paths of active life. On the platform of the shurch the valedictorian stands in all the dignity of allk gown, and speaks the part-ing words; the band peaks forth its mel-low "Home, Sweet Home," the benediction is pronounced, the assemblage disperses, and the collegian is now the man. And amid the congratulations of friends, and the smiles of the fair, the orator steals away to some quiet spot, and there reflects on the pleasures and the sorrows of the day; grieving that he must leave the classic retreat, now doubly dear to him, seeming as a hedge of haw thorn in the distance, smooth and beautiful, all the thorns obscured by the foliage; but rejoicing that his labors are over, and thankful that home, with all its pleasures, is ready to receive him. And on that last night of their collegiate course the comrades of four years gather around the festive board, and with sparkling wit and joyous song strive to disguise the bitterness of their feelings. For the last time the chorus ascends in the much loved "Lauriger," and the valedictorian sings the farewell song. It seems as if his whole soul is in his voice, and the notes sink deep into the hearts of his auditors.-The last bar is sung, and in silence the classmates sit, no one caring to speak first the parting word. But it must be said-it is said, the hands are clasped in a farewell pressure, parting blessings are given and received; the spell is broken, and thus the sweet overture to the opera of life terminates. And they scatter far and wide, some here and some there, some to be tossed or the billows of life, and others to be floated on its calmer waters;

"And when I ask with throbs of pain, When shall they all meet again? As in the days long since gone by The ancient time-piece makes reply, Forever, never, Never, forever.

And now as the youth, buoyant with hope, issues into active life, his song again changes. As a lover, to the sound of the guitar he sings soft amorous ditties; adding with warm glances an earnest to his lays. And thus he woos and wins the maiden's heart. Believe you net, Diedrick, in the power of song to conquer? What says old Burton yonder in withstancing Elia's protest;-in the page which he devotes to the effect of amorous song? "The sweet sound of his voice reanimates my soul through my covetous ears," saith Parthenis. "It was Cleopatra's sweet voice and pleasant speech," adds Democritus Junior himself, "which inreigled Antony." See, my boy, they sit together at the piano, and as their voices so their hearts are blending; as he turns over the music he touches her small, white hand. and their eyes meet in an impassioned gaze. A very pretty page of life's music book this is to be sure; but, false valedictorian as he ir, he was but trifling, whilst she was, alse! oo much in earnest. As droops the lily when deprived of moisture; so her sweet spirit, robbed of life sustaining sympathy, withers away. The maiden passes from the scene; and the psuedo lover becomes a man of the world; having already taken a high degree in the school of deception.

And now in the brillian'ly lighted saloon, arrayed in fashionable attire, he whirls in the giddly waltz, breathing out to his fair partner the incense of unmeaning flattery. His rich voice thrills the assemblage with delight as it rises in some operatic air, or saddens, when forgetting the present, he pours forth some sweet melody, such as be ras wont to sing in days gone by. And But the haleyon school days glide swiftly they praise him loudly, and crowd around by; and the little "noi-y manslor," with all to hear him once more "What a wonder its concomitants of grammars and thomes, ful expression-what grace-what cultivais left for the stately college buildings, half tion!" Press your exhroidered handkerburied in elms, and clothed with awful aca- chief to your eyes, my fair friend, and hide

! soler lalitmes esmell?" Be still, for you only trouble the mind With a joy in which I cannot rejoice, A glory I shall not find."

Ah, valedictorian, whose arms was the last on the commencemet eve; ah, young lover, whose voice blighted the maiden's heart; ab, man of the world, whose music now charms youth and beauty; think on thy feture, prepare for old age, and for death. But he sings his way through manhood sometimes reflecting on the past, sometimes shuddering at the thought of the future; but mostly wrapt up in the pleasures of the present. He travels far in foreign climes, and learns the sougs of the sunny South, and the rough ditties of the Northmen; but to his gay prime, a monetonous undertone now keeps company; it is the voice of remorse, the trumpet tongue of consc

He returns to his native land, and in the eares of a business life forgets the tones that haunted him; finding sweet music in the slink of the dollar. And thus he lives, a lone man, knowing nothing of domestic of filedly, his parents long since dead, and the springs of affection which once bubbled in his breast dried up by the breath of fishion and pride. Alsa, that the bright youth, brilliant in the ball-room, divise in the chorneand eloquent in the class-room should have some to this! Alas, that the innocent phantom of youth appeals so often in vain to the covetous phantom of age.

Time flies quickly on; and new he sings no more; his voice once so beautiful and soft, is now as an unstrung lyre; it no longer obeys its owner's command. In the last days repentance comes, and in his dying moments his voice returns, and with a solemn hymn upon his lips, he expires. From his darkened mansion hired mourners follow the deceased to his last resting place. The opera of life is finished; and the cartain falls with the funeral chaunt.

The fire was low in the chimney-place when I finished, and Diedrick's last morsel of "Lynchburg" had been dephlogisticated;

The London Punel copies the following advertisement from the Dublin Daily

PANTRY BOY.-Wanted, a situation as Pantry Boy by a very respectable Protestant Lady. Application to be made to * * Dungannon, Co. Tyrone.

Rescue FROM DROWNING.—The

means generally adopted by the best and most experienced swimmers, are these:-Keep nesr the person you wish to rescue, but out of reach of his arms until he is nearly exhausted; then, coming behind him, seize him by the left arm between the elbow and shoulder, and push him in the direction you wish him to go. Don't try to carry or drag him : let him go after each push and swim after him; by this means you will get him ashore quicker and with less danger to yourself than in any other way.

MR. WOLFE'S PICTURES.-At the re cent sale of Mr. Wolfe's collection of pictures which produced $114,000, and cost him but some $40 000, the highest price was obtained for a picture by an unknown artist. This represented an indolest scholar indulging his dolce farniente, and was selected as the gem of the collection by a quiet observer, neither professional nor connoisseur, whose eye alone detected its merit before the sale took place, against the dictum of professional judges who named many others a its superior as a work of art.

ta Brigham Young boasts he can see more gold and sliver from the door of his house than would equal the whole currency of the world. These mines are not allowed to be opened. The effect would be, according to Brigham's ideas, to bring near the "City of the Saints" a large mining population, which he would find exceedingly

> "SHOULD a mother's tender care, Cease towards the child she bear. Sovereign nature answers " No! Least of all, when sunk in woe."

Lord Brougham has thought it worth his while to dissipate the Club joke about his thinking Shakspeare an over-rated man. His lordship is described by some body as "a man of vast and general misinformation."

A farmer's wife meeting one of her neighbors returning from market, inquired, What do they pay for eggs at market "I got only eight cents a dozen for now?" mine," he replied. "Eight cents a dozen!" said the indignant dame. "Well, I shall not sell my eggs for eight cents -it don't pay for the wear and tear of the hen !"

SMOKED TO DEATH.-A well-to-do man in Loudon cut his throat the other day while of "unsound mind," so the coroner said, caused by inordinate smoking.

CHICAGO WOOD PAYEMENTS -The Board of Works in the city of Chicago have given the preference to wood pavements over those of stone, as being the most durable of any kind yet used there. The fullo sing is a description of the wethod of construction: Lay down flooring of one-inch boards on a bed of sand; coar the floor with asphatitud; stand on end blocks of wood six incress high by three inches thick, and nine inches length, in rows about an inch apart, divided by strips of boards. Fill in these pen norrow spaces with asphaltum. There are examiles of these pavements in Chicago, which after all years' constant wear, are found to be nearly as perfect as when laid down.

A MONTHLY MAGAZINE

LITERATURE AND FASHION

THE LADY'S PRIEND is devoted to choice Lite. THE LADY'S PRINTING of the Pashions, and also consists the illustration of the Pashions, and also contains the latest patterns of Cloaks, Caps, Boanets, Head-Dresses, Fancy Work, Embroidery, &c., &c.; With Receipts, Music, and other matters interesting to ladice generally. It is edited by Man. HENRY PETERSON, who will rely upon the services in the Literature.

THE BEST WRITERS

A HANDSOME STEEL FASHION PLATE will illustrate or number; hesides well executed Wood Outs, illustrative of Subries, Patterns, &c., too same

A SEWING MACHINE GRATIS

We will give to any person sending thirty subscriptions to THE LADY'S FRIEND and Staty Deliars, one of Wassans & Watson's Calansa.ran Sawisson Machines, such as they sell for Forty-Swe Deliars. The machine will be adlested new at the manufactory in New York, bused, and forwarded free of cost, with the convenient of freight.

In New York, bound, and forwarded from of cost, soid the exception of freight.

In precuring the subscribers for this Premium, we profer that the thirty subscribers should be presured at the ragular terms of Two Deliars for anoh, but where this cannot be done, they may be precured at our sink rates, and the be ance of the flixty Deliars forwarded to us in each by the person desiring the machine. The Maganiars well he not not set dispersed post-affects, if desired. Every person collecting names should send them with the memory as fast as obtained, so that the subscribers may begin at once to receive their papers, and not become dismatisfied with the delay. When the whole number of names (thirty), and whole a mental of money (flixty Pollars), is received, the machine will be duly forwarded.

THRMS.—Our terms are the same as those for the well known weekly paper THE SATURDAY SVEN ING FOST, published by us for the last secondary pears—in coder that the cittle may be made up of the paper and magazine conjointly, where it is so desired and are as follows:—One copy, one year, $2 : Two copies, $6; Fore copies, $6; Eight copies (and one see $46), $12; Twenty (and one gracks), $28. One copy each of THE Lany's FRIENS and THE POST, $3. [] Single numbers of THE LADY'S PRIEND pootage paid by us) twenty cents.

[] The contents of THE MAGAZINE and of THE POST will always be entirely different.

Address DEACON & PETERSON, No. 319 Walnut Street, Philadel

The figure numbers will be sent gratuitous when written for) to those destrous of procuring stribers.

D Editors inserting the above will be entitled

THE BABY IN THE HOUSE.

Every young lady abould make herself familiar with she ordinary care of a child; should learn to bathe, dress and tend it properly, for though she should never have charge of a nursery of her own, she will be prepared for a thousand acts of benevalence and mercy, from which she would be entirely cut off without such knowledge. Little children are ever around us, no matter where we go. And there are tried and sick and overburdened mothers enough in everybody's list of acquaintances. Do not feel, daughter, that "it is none of my con cern" Remember who it is that will say, "I was sick and ye visited me not." Oh you may lay up a precious tressure in hea-ven by deeds of kin-lness to Christ's suffering poor here on the earth, and in no way can you do a greater kindness often than by a timely, skillful ministering to the little children.

Of course your first duty is in you own home circle. Have you little ones there? Do you seek as far as may be to lighten a mother's weary cares, or do you selfishly leave to her and to hirelings the whole responsibility, while your time is all taken up with selfish pursuits, decking your person and entertaining and visiting like rivolous acquaintances?

If there is a little child in your house, re member that you have a duty to perform toward it. If you neglect it, God will not hold you guiltless. Be a true daughter and ister in your house. Do not leave to igno rant and often unscrupulous domestics, the forming of immortal minds and souls so dear to you. Be fitted in all respects to take charge of the household if G of should see fit to call away the mother from her babes, as is so often the case.—Mother's he left for the wars, Plunkett, to Miss Nellie Le reimer. The wedding took place in Wortest, though the parties belong in Leicester. We have now an additional fact of interest connected with the incident. When he left for the wars, Plunkett was engaged to a Miss Le reimer. Journal.

HEAT AND METEORS.

Some philosophers suppose that the sun's heat is kept up by the constant falling into it of comets, asteroids and meteors, which Kepler supposed to be more numerous in the heavens than fishes in the sea. 240,000 meteors are calculated to have been observed on a single night in Boston. Of course it is a serious objection to this theory, that we have no such variation of heat as might be expected from such a chance supply of fuel. But it is something to know that if this earth's motion were suddenly stopped, and it were to drop into the sun, as it un questionably would, the heat generated by the slogle blow would be equal to that developed by the combustion of 5,600 worlds of solid carbon. If, indeed, the whole motion of the world were suddenly arrested, it would not only produce a universal conflagration, but Professor Tyndall calculates that "the quantity of heat generated by this colossal shock would be quite sufficient not only to face the entire earth, but to reduce it in great part to vapors "-Public Ladger.

I A man has sued a London photo graphist for the price paid for two cartes de risites; he told the court that he sat for eventeen days, and the only result was one picture that made him look like a black man, and another that made him look as though he was going to be hung. The court thor of "Tom Brown School Days," regave him its sympatoy, and the artist had to ported the prize fight for the London give him his money.

THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

The Oldest End Best of the Wooklies." The SATURDAY EVENING POST somenced in the first number of the year, a new

OSWALD CRAY.

By Mrs. HENRY WOOD, author of "East

Lynne," "Verner's Pride," &c.
This novel is published from the advance shorts and manuscript corrections, expressly forwarded to us by Mrs. Wood from England. The length of this new story will be about the came as that of "East Lynne," and "Versor's Pride."

The constant object of the publishers of Tax Pour is to lay before their readers the

Very Best Stories by Native and Poreign

In addition to the Stories written expressly for THE POST, its Editor also cirives to by before its renders, the best Stories from the Reglish Periodicals. And gives, in addition to the false and Sketches, more or less Agricultu-ral Matter, with a Riddle, Receips, Nove, and Market Departments, every week.

A SEWING MACHINE GRATIS!

We will give to any person heading thirty subscriptions to THE POST and Sixty Dollars one of WHEELER & WILSON'S CELEBRA TED SEWING MACHINES, such as they cell for Porty-five Dollars. The machines will be anicoted new at the manufactory in New York, boxed, and forwarded free of seet, with the sequition of freight.

In precuring the subscribers for this Fremium, we prefer that the thirty subscribers should be procured at the regular terms of Two Dollars for each, but where this sannot be done, they may be procured at our club rates, and the balance of the Sixty Dollars forwarded to us in each by the person destring the mackins. The pupers will be sent to different Past-Offices, if desired. Every person collecting names should send them with the money as fast as obtained, so that the subscribers may begin at once to so that the subscribers may begin at once to receive their papers, and not become disastis-fied with the delay. When the whole number of names (thirty), and whole amount of money (8ixty dollars), is received, the machine will be

TERMS: CASH IN ADVANCE.

1 copy, one year, . 2 copies, one year, 4 copies, one year, -8 copies, (and one to getter-up of club,) 30 copies, (and one to getter-up of club.) One copy of THE POST and one of THE LADY'S FRIEND,

Subscribers in British North America must remit twenty cents in addition to the annual subscription, as we have to prepay the U. S. post-age on their papers.

As the price of THE POST is the sam as that of THE LADY'S FRIEND, the Clube may be composed exclusively of the paper, or partly of the paper and partly of the magazine. Of course, the premium may be either one or the other, as deaired.

The matter in the paper will always be different from that in the magazine.

8pecimen numbers of THE POST sent

DEACON & PETERSON, NO. 319 WALNUT ST., PHILADELPHIA.

Editors who insert the above, or con ense the material portions of it for their editorial columns, shall be entitled to an exchange, by sending us a marked copy of the paper conaining the advertisement or notice.

LATRLY was mentioned the marriage of the armless color sergeant of a Massachu-setts regiment, Plunkett, to Miss Nellie Lerconsidered his helpless condition and off-red a release to his betrothed, which was readily ccepted. Her sister was so indignant at this that she said she would marry the brave this that she said she would marry the brave man herself if he was agreeable, and agree-able he was, and they married. The Hart-ford (Conn.) Post, on whose authority we relate this anecdete, says that "thanks to the generosity of the Brokers' Boards of Boston and New York, and of the people he has met since his return, Plunkett, the tero, is in independent circumstances pecu-nicilly."

LIEZT, the planist, has been lately honor d, at the convent where he is staying, by visit from the Pope, before whom he played the piano for an hour. When he was done Pius IX embraced the punist, and said, "You have made me hear celestial harmo-nies. Toanks to you, I can now form an idea of what angel choruses ought to be." Lisz: is now busy in secting to music the life of Saint Francia, of Assis, the saint who, according to Renau, approached in charac-ter nearer to Christ than any other man who

BATTLE INCIDENT .- We extract the following from a soldier's letter, descriptive of the battle of Mission Rifge:— During the rout of the rebels on Lookout

Mountain, large numbers of them crouched benind the huge rocks, and as our men came rushing up to them, held up their han's im-ploring. Don't hill on we give up." Kill you, the d-l, no! Got any tobacco? Snell you, the despite the street of their large plugs of bebacce, our boys rushed on, many of them holding a propriet ween their tecta.

It is said tost Thomas Hughes, an-

LATEST NEWS.

General Kelly has triagraphed the rebole have retreated from the viels Comberland, and have gone towards?

London W.A.

his comman.
Not long since three Union politics murdered by guardine sees Multurey, General Thomas has meaning the eye pathons living with event of the assessments in the event of the assessments in the event of the assessments in the divided between the funding of the divided between the funding of the

in the problem with the problem of t

POTAGE INFORTANCE OF PATIES THE POSTAGE IN FULL.—The law is, when supthing is put into the postolice undepend, the sum which restains due shall be paid double by the receiver. Thus, if John Smith send Jim Jones a letter rated at six Smith send Jim Jones a letter state and conta, but pays three cents only, it is not kept back like an uspeld letter, but Jim Jones at the end has the eix cents to pay. And so on all packages through the mail.

This extra charge of 35 per cent. we suppose, is to make people more careful to know that they pay enough, and to compensate for extra troubles and risk. Letters are three cents per half ounce aix es per ounce-and so on, each fraction ever j ounce or I ounce counting three seats. This applies to all maliable matter, scaled or unscaled, except transless newspapers, which rate at two cents for each four or and books and pamphlets, which rate at 4 cents each four ounces. The postage on a weekly paper like Ten Poer is 30 scale a year, payable quarterly in advance at the office where received.

The President's proclamation of amnesty seems to frighten the rebel leaders a good deal. They are afraid the people will accept the offer of pardon, and leave tem "out in the cold." Resolutions offered lu the Virginia Legislature declare that ali who entertain the offered terms " are destints of patriotism, and will be so regarded and treated by the authorities.

13" A letter from a secesh lady in New Orienna, to a friend in Mobile, was recently captured, and reveals the fears of the Secossionists. Among other remarks of the kind, occurs the following: "The work of spoliation is going on rapidly, and the Yankee officers are locating their families with an air of permanency truly distressing."

to ICE CLAD,-An eagle, so loaded down with ice that he couldn't fly, was captured in Orange, last week. He measured 13 Jenny Lind, it is said, has lost her voice. What a fortune it would be to the finder!

The Rev. L. Suaw, of Parmingdale, as we learn from the Gardiner Journal enlisted last week, and passed examination except his teeth. He insisted that he would carry a coffee mill that would fix hard tack so that he could eat it, but the surgeons would not pass him.

2 Prof. Packard, of Bowdoin College, said recently at a public meeting at Lewis on, that his experience of forty yes dealing with young men, had demonstrated that there was no other vice so much to be dreaded, and which had made ship wreck of so many promising youths, as intemperance.

The Bangoreans have got a skating park housed in-the building fitted up with gas lights, pictures, and a gallery for visitors. This is the lux ary of skating, but after all it isn't equal to skating by moonlight on some pond in the quiet woods, or over the surface of the frozen river, with the snowclad pines and spruces lining the banksnature's picture gallery-and the spice of freedom and adventure which accompanies such out-door sports.

THE LAST NOVELTIES IN HAIR-Dakasing.—Some novel sayles of arranging the hair have appeared lately. The Medicis and the Greek bandeaux will most probably be adopted this winter. The latter is made of aky-blue or ceruse velvet, starred with small brilliants; it is placed upon the head in the centre of the small fashionable curis, which it appears to hold. Tae Medicis is more complicated; it is a small diadem advancing in a point upon the forebead, and in, made in groseille or bine velvet, likewise studded with diamonds, either siars of crescents. A comb made partly of shell and partly of velvet completes this Medics' headdress; this is worn between the loops of air at the back.

They have but just learned how to make files by machinery in Zog and, an art which has been known have for twenty BY GERALD MARKET.

I'll point you Lady Marien: She walls this world, a Shining One! A Wesses with an Angel's face, Sweet gravity, and tender grace; And where she trends this earth of ours, on bicocome into emiling flowers.
This is the Lady Marian.

One of the spirits that walk in white! Many dumb hearts that sit in night see know, just as the Bir Know Morning. Murmuring cheerful Where Life is darkest she doth more With influence as of visible Love.
This is the Lady Marian.

One of God's treasurers for the Poor! The keepeth open heart and door. That heart a holy well of wealth, Srimming life-waters, quick with health; That door on opening you look through, To find God our side of Heaven's blue, This is the Lady Marian

Her coming all your being fills With a halm-breath from Heaven's hills: And in her face the light is mild As the' the heart within her smiled And in her heart doth sit and sing me spirit of immortal Spring. This is the Lady Marian

"We shall not mend the world; we try, And lo, our work is vain!" they cry With her pathetic look, she hears; You see the wounded soul bleed tears ; But toward the dark she sets her face, And calmly keeps her onward pace. This is the Lady Marian.

True picture of the Master of old! Touches of likeness manifold! The human sweetness in His face; Large love that would a world en His Heavenly pity in her eyes, And all the soul of eacrifice This is the Lady Marian

THE DEAF DISPUTANTS.

A shepherd was guarding his flock at short distance from a village. This shepherd was deaf. Though noon had arrived his wife had not yet brought him his breakfast. He did not dare to leave his sheep lest they should be stolen in his absence; but his hunger became flerce, and he was driven, in consequence, to act in the manner we are

On the banks of a peighboring stream totty was cutting grass for his cow; the shepherd drew near to him, though with repugnance; for though persons of this prosion, are entrosted with the duty of making public and private property respected, yet they are themselves, for the most part, great thieves. The shepherd begged the totty to keep an eye on his sheep while he to breakfast, and promised to recompeose him generously on his return.

real

ps the

The totty, who was not less deaf than the shepherd, replied, in an animated and angry "What right have you over the gram which I have just cut? Must my cow starve while your sheep are feeding at its expense? Leave me alone, and go about your business." He accompanied this apps trophe with an expressive gesture of the hand, which the shepherd took for a mark of consent to what he had demanded.

Consequently the shepherd ran as fast as he could, resolved to give his wife such a correction as to keep her in future from the boldness to be guilty of a similar negli-But when he approached the cottage he perceived his wife stretched on the ground at the threshold. She was writhing in horrible pain, the penalty for having eaten too great a quantity of raw beans.

The shepherd's anger calmed at the sight of his poor wife's sufferings. He hastened to succor her, and to prepare the breakfast himself. These various cares occupied him a much longer time than he had expected. His impatience was great, for he was far trusting the honesty of him to whom he had consigned the guardianship of his flock. At last he was able to go back. His sheep were feeding at a short distance from the place where he had left them. He forthwith set himself to verify the number thereof Not one was wanting. Delighted, he cried, "What a capital fellow this totty is! He is the pearl of the persons of his clars. I have deed him a recompense, and well does he deserve one."

The shepherd had in his flock a sheer which was lame, but which was a very respectable sheep in other respects. He took totty said, "You have taken good care of my flock in my absence. Look, there is sheep which I give you as a present."

The totty seeing this lame sheep brought under his very nose, replied with much vicity, "Why do you accuse me of having m your sheep's leg? I swear to you your departure, I have not gone near your flock, and that I have not stirred from the spot where you see ma."

"The sheep is good and fat," added the shepherd; "you can family and your fries rd; "you can regale with it your

"I have already told you," answered the sty in a mgs, "that I never went near me sheep. Why so you persist in accu-me of having lamed one of them? Get out of my way, unless you want me to give you a thorough threshing." He at once took an attitude indicating an intestion to accomplish his threat.

The shophers, purceiving this, and being pherd, purceiving this, and being completely bewildered by a provoculos so upjust, put himself on the defensive. Just as they were about to pull each other's ears, a horseman chanced to pass by. They stoppe the horse by the bridle, and the shepherd said to him who mounted it-" Listen, I pray you, for a moment, and decide whether am to blame in the quarrel in which we two are involved. I wish to make a present a sheep to this man, as a recompense for a small service which he has rendered me, and, as thanks for my good intentions, he wants to thrush me."

The totty, speaking in his turn, said— Tale blockhead of a shepberd has the imnudence to accuse me of having broken the leg of one of his sheep, and yet I never went near his flock at all."

The horseman whom they had taken as arbiter was still more deaf than the shepherd and the totty. He had not understo a word of what they had said to him. confess," he replied, "that this horse does not belong to me. I found it straying on the high road. I was in a hurry. I mounted it that I might travel the faster. Does it belong to you? If so, take it, and allow me to continue my journey, for I have no time to loss,"

The shepherd and the totty, each imagin ing that the horseman had decided in favor of his adversary, began to denounce each other more furious'y than before, to curs the arbiter, and to reproach him with lejus

Meanwhile, an old Brahmin, who wa passing, appeared to them the most suitable to terminate their quarrel. They therefore stopped him, begged him to lister to them for a momen', and, speaking all three at once, they stated to him the subject of their dispute, and urged him to decide which of them was in the wrong.

The Brabmin, who happened to be quit as deaf as themselves, replied, "Yes, yes; understand you. It is my wife, who has sent you to hinder my departure, and to icduce me to return home. But my resolution is taken, and you cannot succeed. Do you know my wife? She is a real demon. It is impossible for me to live longer with such a womar. Since the time-worse luck to me -that I married her, she has made me commit more sins than a hundred generations coulf atone for, or efface. I am going on a pilgrimage to Kassy. Oa reaching that holy city, I intend to bathe in the sacred waters of the Ganges, in order to purify myself from the innumerable faults to which he wickedness has driven me. I have deter mined to live af erwards, on alms, in foreign country, and to remain separated from her for ever."

Whilst they were thus all hideously yel! ing, without understanding each other, or coming nearer to a settlement of their dis putes, the horseman saw some persons ad vancing at a rapid rate toward them. Fear ing that it was the owners of the horse which he had stolen, he very quickly dismounted and scampered off.

The shepherd, perceiving that it was get ting late, made haste to find his flick, which had wandered off to a great distance. As he was running along, he did not fail to declaim against arbiters, and to protest that there was no longer any justice to be found on the earth. As to the rest, he attributed the accidents and the contradictions to which he had that day been exposed to a serpent which he had accidently met on the

The totty returned to the heap of gras which he had cut. Perceiving near it the lame sheen he threw it on his shoulders and carried it home, thinking to punish the shepherd for quarrelling with him so usceremoniously and so urjustly.

As to the old Brabmin, he continued his journey, till he found a cosy corner, where he could pass the night. Repose softened sleep subdued his bad humor toward his wife. On the morrow the Brahmins of his village, his relations and friends, came to where he was, and succeeded in completely soothing him. They induced him to return home, promising to employ their good offices to render his wife more submissive and less a term sgant.

"LIVERY SERVANTS" IN NEW YORK .-A cotemporary says :- " In the Central Park, the other day, we counted forty car risges driven by servants in livery. Twenty five years ago, it would have been difficult setting saide the attendants of foreign ministers—balf that number of livery servants in the United States. Every year we are more and more the raree show splendors of the European aristocracy. We shall soon have as much gold leaf on our gingerbread as they. It seems to us that ome thirty years ago, such beings as 'plain republicans' existed. Where are they now Timeel, trumpery and etiquette reign su preme at the seat of government. Look at the quarterings of some of our new first families. The panels of their carriages dis play coats of arms that you would hardly know from some of those that date from the days of the Crusades. We are getting along fisely. By-and-by we shall have lords and ladies, perhaps. Nay, perhaps something

Byron on the Battle of Waterloo.

This interesting statement is copied from an account of Lord Byron, furnished to Allibone's Dictionary of Authors, by George Ticknor, Beq., of B seton:-

While he (Byron) was talking, Sir Jame Bland Burges, a fourth or fifth rate poet who wrote "the Exediad" with Cumber land, and a part of whose "Epick on Richard the Lion Hearted," Lord Byron, in his Hints from Horses," says he found at Malta lining a trunk-came suddenly into the room and said abruptly-

"My lord! my lord! a great battle been fought is the Low Countries, and Bo naparte is entirely defeated." "Bat is it true ?" said Lord Byron, " is it

"Yes, my lord, it is certainly true. aid-de-camp arrived in town this night. He has been in Downing street this morning. and I have just seen him as he was going to Lady Wellington's. He says he thinks Bonaparte is now in full retreat towards

After an instant's pause, Lord Byron re-

"I am d-d sorry for it;" and then, after another slight pause, he added-"I didn't know but I might live to see Lord Castle reagh's head on a pole; but I suppose shan't, now."

And this was the first impression pro duced on his impetuous and ill-governed nature by the news of the battle of Waterloo. Two days afterwards I met him at Murray's rooms, where he received, very good-humoredly, the satirical congratulaions of Gifford and some others of his Tory friends, on the great victory; but he did no disguise his feelings or opinions about it, and would not admit that the Emperor's case was desperate even then. I was much surprised at all this, though less than I should have been if I had not already heard similar feeling about the whole war of the Hundred Days with Bonsparte expressed by leading Whige, such as the eminent Mr. Roscoe, of Liverpool, who, of course, spoke more wisely and mildly on the subject, and by Dr. Parr, at Hatton, who was almost as extravagant as Lord Byron.

FORBIDDEN FRUIT.

There is a proverb to the effect that stole read excites the appetite, and another proverb is universal that forbidden fruit is the est and the sweetest. Proverbs of this kind are supposed to apply especially to the daughters of Eve, as the following history of a lady tells us, showing how she learned to grow fond of onions :- This lady was confessing her sins to the prica'. He imposed on her a penance which seemed to her far "Some kind of penance I must inflict," said the pricet, "but as you desire it I shall try to select as light a one as I can. Is there any kind of food to which you have strong dislike?" " For onlons, your Reverence, I have a special abhorrence, and I have never been able to eat them." well, then you must not eat onions for six weeks. This is an easy, and it is sure to prove a very useful penanca." For the first eight days the lady ate no onions, though she had a strong desire to know how they tasted. She then thought to herself the one could not signify much. She, there fore, rousted one and ate it; after a while another; and before the six weeks were ended, she had gone so far that she could not live without onlone. This lady is still alive though it would be uncourteous and ungallant to give her name. With forbidden books it is the same as with forbidder fruit. Tacitus says that Nero ordered all the books which he hated, to be burned These books were greedily sought and read as lorg as the prohibition lasted. But they were at oace forgotten when everybody was allowed to possess and to peruse them is no less true now.

TO HAVE A GOOD MEMORY.-There re nains a rule which is perhaps the most im portant of all, and that is embodied in the old prayer for "a sound mind in a sound body." In vain shall we look for vigorous memories if our bodily systems are de ranged; in vain expect to draw a shining blade from a damp and rusty scabbard Early rising is as great an assistant to goo powers of recollection as can possibly be imagined. Temperance, strict temperance both in eating and drinking, are positive secessities, if we would have our mem in good working order; and the excessive use of tobacco is, I feel sure, decidedly pre indicial. The memory, like much other mental machinery, depends more on the gomacl than we are generally willing to allow From dyspepsia proceed what we vulgarily term "thick-headedness," indistinctness, unwillingness to work, and inability to do so even were we willing. Those, then, that would have their memories powerful and active, must be "temperate in all things," and rise with the larks, those " ploughmen's clocks," as our great Shakspeare terms the so far for natural aid to memory.

IT The earth is a great factory-wheel which, on every evolution on its axis, receives fifty thousand raw souls and turns off nearly the same number worked up more or PUNCTUATION.

The Dean of Centerbury says on this subject:-"I remember when I was young in printing, once correcting the puncti proof-sheet, and complaining of the liberties which had been taken with my manuscript. The publisher quietly answered me that punctuation was always left to the com fore. And a precious mess they make of The great enemies to understanding anything printed in our language are the commas. And these are inserted by the compositors without the slightest compane tion on every possible occasion. Many word are by rule always hitched off with two ommas: one before and one behind; sursec as the Omeibus Company would call it. Too is one of the words; however, another; also, another; the sense in almost every such case being disturbed, if not destroyed, by the process. I remember beginning a sentence with—'However true this may be.' When it came in the proof, the inevitable commi was after the however, thus of course making nonsense of my unfortunate sentence. have some satisfaction in reflecting that, in the course of editing the Greek text, I lieve I have destroyed more than a thousand mmas, which prevented the text being roperly understood. One very provoking case is that where two adjectives come to rether, belonging to the same noun sub stantive. Thus, in printing a nice young man, a comma is placed after nice, giving, you will observe, a very different sense from that intended: bringing before us the fact that a man is both nice and young, whereas the original sentence introduced to us young man that was nice.

"Thus too in the expression a great black log; printed without commas, everybody knows what we mean; but this would be printed 'a great, black dog.' Take again a case where meaning is intensified by adjec tives being repeated—as in the soids wide world, the deep deep sea. Such expressions you almost invariably find printed the wide wide world, the deep, deep sea, thereby making them, if judged by any rule at all, absolute

"Still, though too many commas are be too few are not without inconvenience also I saw the other day a notice of 'the Society for Promoting the Observance of the Lord's day which was founded in 1831,' giving the notice that the day, not the society, was founded in that year. Had the date been 1631, instead of 18, an awkward interpreta tion might have been possible.

"While I am upon stops, a word is neces say v concerning notes of admiration. A note of admiration consists, as we know, of a point with an upright line suspended over it, strongly suggestive of a gentleman jumping off the ground with amazement. These shricks, as they have been called, are scatered up and down the page by compositors without any mercy. If one has written the words O sir, as they ought to be written, viz.: with the plain capital 'O' and no stop, and then the comma after Sir, our friend the compositor is sure to write OA with a shrick (!) and to put another shrick after Sir. Use, in writing, as few as possible of these nuisances. They always make the where they are really necessary, is where the language is pure exclamation, as in How beautiful is the night! or, O that I might find him!"

LITTLE THINGS.

Two men were at work together one day n a ship-yard. They were hewing a log of timber to put into a ship. It was a small og, and not worth much. As they cut off the chips they saw a worm-a little worm, about half an inch long.

"This log is wormy," said one; "shall

"I do not know, Yes, I think it may go in. It will never be seen, of course,' "Yes; but there may be other worms in

"No. I think not. To be sure, it is not worth much; yet I do not wish to lose it But come, never mind the worm; we have en but one ; put it in."

The log was accordingly put in. The ship was finished, and, as she was launched off into the waters, all ready for the seas she looked beautiful as the swan when the breeze ruffles his white-feathered bosom, as he sits on the waters. She went to sea, and for a number of years did well. But it was found, on a distant voyage, she grew weak and rotten. Her timbers were found to be all eaten away by worms. But the captain thought he would try and get her home He had a great, costly load of goods in the ship-such as silks, crape and the like-and a great many people. On their way home a storm gathered. The ship for a while climbed up the high waves, and then plunged down, rolling finely; but then she sprang a-leak. They had two pumps, and the mer worked at them day and night; but the wa ter came in faster than they could pump out. She filled with water, and then wen down under the dark blue waters of the ccean, with all the goods and all the people on board. Every one perished. Oh, how many wives, mothers, and children mourned over husbands, and sons, and fathers, for whose return they were waiting, and who never returned. And all, all, this probably | CHILDREN GROWING ID cause that little log of timber with the in it was put in when the ship was built. How much property, and how many lives may be destroyed by a little worm and how much evil may a man do when he does a small wrong, as that man did who put the worm-raten timber in the ship?

AGE AND YOUTH.

BY GERALD MASSET.

" I am like the hoary mountain Gray with years, and very old : And your life, a sprightly fountain, Dancing, dancing on your way, Down the valleys warm and gay.

There you go, Dear, singing, sparkling, I can see your dawn begin; While the night, around me darkling,

With its death-dews, shuts me in Hear you singing on your way To the full and perfect day."

The Thrush and the Caterpillar.

"Cruel bird! barbarous abuser of supe for strength! What! is there not enough to gratify thee on earth—its precious fruits, o sweet, so abundant-are they not suffi cient, but thou must destroy life to appear thine appetite? Ah! I rejoice—the lari has risen beyond thy flight. He is hidden in yonder fleecy cloud, and thou returnes baffled-defeated, It is well!"

And the thrush, who had indignantly watched the hawk on its pursuit, nestled more closely over her young brood, comparing herself, greatly to her own advantage, with the bird of prey.

behind a leaf, "I beg to spologize; but allow me to say that I am rejoiced to hear your new view of things. You breakfasted this morning on an intimate friend of mine, and I have been keeping close ever since, for fear you should lunch on me; but after what you have said, my apprehensions must be groundless. You will. I am sure, hence forth confine yourself to vegetable diet."

"Humph!" muttered the thrush: "awk ward that; it never struck me that 'people who live in glass houses should not throw

We often learn the true character of our own deeds in observing what is done by

A GOOD MEMORY. .

Dr. Fuller had a prodigious memory, and could name in order, we are informed, all the signs, on both sides of the way, from the beginning of Paternoster Row at Ave Marie Lane, to the bottom of Cheapside at the Mansion House. He once made a visit, in the days of the great rebellion, to a committee of sequestrators, who were sitting at Waltham, in Essex. These gentlemen very soon began to talk about Dr. Fuller's great powers of memory, to which he replied Tis true, gentlemen, that fame has given me the report of a memorist, and if please, I will give you an experiment of it. sense weaker, where you can possibly do The party were delighted, and told him they without them. The only case I know of should consider it a great favor if he would should consider it a great favor if he would so far oblige them; and laying aside all business, they prepared themselves to listen "Gentlemen," said the worthy Fuller, "I will give you an instance of my good memory in that particular. Your worships have thought fit to sequester an honest, poor, but Cavalier parson, my neighbor, from his living, and committed him to prison; he has great charge of children, and his circum stances are but indifferent. If you please to release him out of prison, and restore him to his living, I will never forget the kindness while I live."

It is said that the committee complied and restored the poor clergyman. Among the more showy uses to which we may from time to time put our memories, let us not it, and these may increase, and injure the forget, when occasion serves, to use it for so good an end as did the worthy Dr. Fuller.

A FALSE PROVERB,-"Ignorance is the mother of admiration!" that is to say, the ess a man knows of all the strange things going on around him, the greater cause he has for wonder. Now, we beg leave to differ very decidedly from the above notion. So far from ignorance being the mother of wonder, we cannot fancy any one with less cause for wonder than an ignorant, illiterate man. We feel almost tempted to say that we have met with stolid agricultural labor ers who will wonder at nothing; partly, doubtless, because the horizon of their knowledge is so contracted; but chiefly we are inclined to think, because the faculty of wonder had not been roused into a state of activity. This faculty, the cause of such intense pleasure to many, is no doubt existent in all; but so long as the world of wonders is shut out, so long as the mind is left to vegetate in an atmosphere of mere material occupations, the faculty is not more than existent: it misses its due share in the conomy of man's life; for no one can scan even with moderate attention, the physics world around, without finding how great an influence over his mind does this faculty of wonder exercise, and also for how much healthful enjoyment in life he is indebted

BY HENRY WARD BEECHES

They take their first steps. They had from the period of easy ob jection to command, into the period h which they are to assume the response of their own conduct. It is a difficult of their own conduct. It is a difficult mage. How to carry a young man on the fifteen to twenty years of age, is steering ground, and both shores are with purils. No one can foresee the cumstances that betide their children long as they are children, we have the good of them; but as soon as they begin to childhood, and to take hold upon made, we begin to feel that the problem more uncertain, more difficult, and note to of anticipations of pain, and realism pain. It is the problem whether they been educated so as to endure they been educated so as to endure the stions of outer life. Parents scarcely what their children are made up of do not know what strain they will be They do not know where the crus will be. They do not know whether a can be broken or not. For the family a velops not the worse side of the characteristics. but the best. Nor is there any oppor within the family, and while they are the sheltered, for them to be set upon by temptations as may afterwards quite or whelm them.

MICROSCOPIC CURIOSITIES

Without ocular proof by the aid of the nicroscope, who could have believed the following account of one of the com of animalcule; the Melicerta !-

The smallest point that you could make with the finest steel pen would be too come and large to represent its natural dissions; yet it inhabits a snug little house of its own construction, which it has built w stone by stone, cementing each with perfect symmetry, and with all the skill of an accomplished mason, as it proceeded. It estlects the material for its mortar, and migles it; it collects the material for its briefs, and moulds them; and this with a precise only equalled by the skill with which there them when they are made.

Here, again, is an account of one of these living atoms inhabiting, with thousands of others, a few drops of stagnant water:-

Several tiny creatures are laboring with the most praiseworthy industry among the close leaves of the plant. Here is one which may remind us of a guinea-pig in its general outline; but you must suppose the two hind feet to be changed into a divergent fork, and the fore feet to be obliterated. It is a mos restless little rogue; ranging among the filamentous leaves of the Myriophyllum with incessant activity, he now pokes his way through some narrow aperture, using his curious-forked foot as a point of resistance, now pauses to nibble among the decayed rind, and now scuttles off through the open water to some other part. We see his large eye, shining with the color of a ruby, an et, like that of Polyphemus, right in the middle of his forehead, and his curious ap paratus of jaws, the points of which are pretruded from the front of his head, and vicerously worked, when he is grubbing among the decaying vegetable matter, adding continually morsel after morsel to the great mass of yellow-green food, which is already swelling out his abdomen to a pig-like

THE HYENA IN TADMOR.

Everywhere around are the remains of he glorious city; walls and gateways, and olumns of polished granite of rosy hue, or of marble that gleams like snow in the bright moonlight; many standing in their desolateness, but many more prostrate and half-buried in the drifted sand. * * breeze, which had lifted the sand in playful eddies, drops to perfect calmness, Black clouds are collecting over the mountainrange that forms the distant horizon. A hurricane suddenly sweeps through the

The rain now comes down in one universal deluge. * *

Flash follows flash in one continuous blaze of blinding light, bringing out the grim marble towers and pillars against the black clouds of midnight with an awfully sublime distinctness; and crash after crash peel after peal of thunder are blending into one uninterrupted roll. But amidst the deep roar rises from the gaunt heaps of stone an unearthly sou like the laugh of a demon. Again, the cackling mirth echoes along the ruined halls, as if exulting in the wild war of the elements, and in the desolation around.-Lo! from out of you low arch, in the palace of tombs, gleam two fiery eyes, and forth stalks into the lightning the fell byess With bristling mane and grinning teeth the obscene monster glares at you, and warm you to secure a timely retreat. Another appears, bearing in its jaws a loathsome hunan skull, which it has found in the carevan track. You shudder as you hear the cones crack and grind beneath the powerful teeth, and gladly shrink away from the repulsive vicinity.

The only disadvantage of an honest heart is credulity.

ROWING UP RD BEECHER

t steps. They provide the control of the period in the period in the period in the control of th It is a difficult young man on a confidence are foressed their children, we have the goal they begin to modify and realisation whether they begin to make and realisation whether they begin to the confidence and realisation whether they be madere the termination of the confidence and realisation whether they be madere the termination of the confidence and the confidence are confidence and the confidence are confidence as a confiden

endure the teaments scarcely have made up of The ain they will be the crushing pass now whether he for the family as of the character. hile they are the set upon by man wards quite over by the sid of the ave believed be you could make uld be too come natural discong little ho each with perfect roceeded. It calnortar, and min-rial for its bricks with a precis ith which it lay of one of the th thousands of ant water:e laboring with stry among the ere is one which ig in its general ose the two hind ergent fork, and d. It is a most ng among the pokes his way ture, using his t of resistance. g the decayed rough the open Ve see his large of a ruby, and s, right in the which are proead, and vice ubbing among r, adding conto the great hich is already

RIOSITIES

DMOR.

to a pig-like

e remains o gateways, and f rosy hue, or snow in th ding in their prostrate and change. The nd in playful mess. Black ne mountain orizon, · · through the one universal tinuous blaze ut the grim nst the black fully sublime crash, peal ses from the rthly sound,

Again, the the ruined war of the n around.n the palace fell byens. ng teeth the and warms t. Another theome kun the cars-

u hear the the power-

y from the

an honest

WATCHING.

Watching when the morning breaketh O'er the mountains cold and gray; Watching when the evening fadeth In the last long finsh of day; Watching when the stars look gladly Over all the moonlit sea, When the night is silent round us-Love, for thee,

Holy memories steal e'er me Of the far far distant past; Fairest visions float before me All too bright, too sweet to last. Watching in the midnight dressy, Longing thy dear face to see; Watching till the heart grows weary, Love, for thee.

Ceaselessly against the window Beats the dismal plashing rain, Telling stories weird and wretched Of what ne'er can come again; And the night-lamp burneth faintly On the table, cheerlessly, And my heart is weary, watching, Love, for thee.

Watching for the lightest footstep While my soul is deeply stirr'd By a murmur 'neath the case By a softly spoken word; And I gaze into the darkne Rain and darkness, dreamily Watching, longing, longing, watching,

Oh! the day succeeds the night-time With its floods of rosy light; Following the gloomy winter Comes the summer warm and bright. And the leaflet to the tree, And all is gay in spring-time, Love, but me.

The birds will mate them gladly When the year is in its prime; The flowers will smell the sweeter In the happy summer-time. I, sad, alone, will watch it-The wide, the cruel sea— While its billows bear thee farther, Love, from me.

Watching all the happy summer, When the days are long and bright; Watching while the autumn noontide Fadeth slowly into night: Watching through the dreary winter. When the spring's first buds I see; Watching till the heart grows weary, Love, for thee.

THE CASTLE OF MONT ORGUEIL A STORY OF CHARLES THE SECOND.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "UNDER THE ICE," &c. Built on the summit of a rock on the co

coast of Jersey, the Castle of Mont Orguell not only gives a beautiful view of the scenery of the island, but also commands an extensive sea view, reaching on a clear day as far as the French coast. Looking in the latter direction, the spectator, at or near low-water, sees innumerable rocky lalets scattered on every side. Many of these are covered at ordinary tides, and the most of them at periods when the tides are highest, which on this coast reach the altitude of forty feet. By the signs which are placed on some of these rocks, the fisherman is able to run his boat ashore without risk of bringing it in contact with the sharp granite points concealed within a few inches of the surface; but though the fisherman, who has been accustomed to the port from his boyhood, may do this, any other man attempting it would surely be wrecked, and in that case his chances of escape from death would be small indeed. Strangely as the name of this castle may sound in English ears, it is a heap of foam, or flying into the air in associated with events among the most in-large drops, which sparkled like diamonds pleases. Charles himself wanted to dance teresting in our national history. Held in where the misty vanor which rose with them with her once, but he has got some careful turn by Frenchmen, Englishmen, and na- was thin enough to allow the white rays tives of the island, all of whom have been besiegers and besieged, there can hardly be On this rock was seated two gipses, one a square yard of the rock on which it stands from which a soul has not departed to give ing to indicate the exact position of a boat an account of its deeds. Sometimes it has to Captain Whitehead, who was standing been a place of refuge, at other times a a little above them, his hand held above prison. It was the former to the young his eyes to shield them from the sun. man Charles Stuart, the latter to the unfortunate Prynne, the uncompromising enemy of his house, whose miserable cell is still to be seen. In fact, the castle is still in excellent preservation, and little injured by the events of the past; and so slight is the influence which time can exercise on the granite blocks of which it is built, that it may continue to occupy its present position for ages to come.

Not many days since, while examining the external works, my eye was caught by the appearance of a chain dangling from the wall of the highest part of the castle. The links were of considerable thickness, and were terminated by a stout ring; the upper end of the chain being attached to the wall by means of a staple driven into the mortar between two stones as far below the parapet as a man could reach by bending over. I afterwards found that this waiting two or three minutes, apparently to chain, though strong in appearance, was in reality so eaten into by rust as to be incapa said—"We may as well get some breakfast. able of sustaining even a moderate weight. It will be two hours before it is high-water, At the moment when my attention was and by that time Turner will have run into its history. To my inquiry as to the purpose for which the chain was fastened in such a place, he replied:

"That chain is connected with one of the most exciting incidents enacted here, and but for its assistance England would never have numbered among its Kings a second Charles Stuart."

"Will you be good enough," I asked, to tell me what that incident was?"

"Certainly," he answered. I seeted myself on one of the guns, and imagining, from the deliberate manner in which the old gentleman chose a spot to alt down upon, that his tale would be a long one, I lighted a cigar, which I had bought at a shop before beginning the ascent, in payment for which I had tendered a shillling, and received in return the cigar and twelvepence change—an advantageous arrangement for the purchaser, not attainable, I imagine, in any other portion of Her Ma-

During the time (he began) King Charles was in Jersey, several attempts were made to carry him off by private adventurers, who knew that wealth, if not honors, would be accorded to the man who should be fortunate enough to place him in the hands of Cromwell. Among those whose ambition or thirst for gold, or some other motive, prompted them to ponder on a method of effecting his capture, was a man whose real name was unknown, but who was afterwards spoken of by the natives of Jersey as the not really a gipsy, however, was evident from his appearance. Though swarthy as one of that race, he had not their dark hair or eyes, but, on the contrary, was a fair-haired man with blue eyes. He was rather short and strongly built, wore his hair and beard cut close; and his aspect altogether is said to have excited the suspicion that he was of a very superior class to the gipsies with whom clated. By some he was said to have joined these wanderers out of love for a girl of the gang, others said he had been a soldier among the Royalists, and had been bribed by the Parliamentarians to try to capture the fugitive Prince; and many other rumors were current in the island concerning him. Probably most of these rumors were only originated after the occurrence I am going to tell you; but one thing is pretty certain, that he was a man of great determination, and, whether actuated solely by hatred of Charles, or that he was no stranger to him. I should mention here that what I am about to relate came to my knowledge while examining a great chest of paper which was left by my wife's father, who was one of the jurats of the island. The manuscript was not in his writing, though not unlike it, which satisfied me that if not written by him, it was probably written by his father or grandfather; for I dare say you have noticed that a striking resemblance exists in the handwriting of the male descendants of a family: I have myself seen this resemblance so strong, that it was only by a close comparison I could detect any difference in that of the father or the grandfather and their issue.

by this feeling and ambition combined,

The tide was dashing flercely against a rugged mass of granite, beating itself into of the morning sun to shine upon them of whom, with outstretched arm, was try

"Aye," said the captain, "I can see plainly enough. Turner must be a fool to keep on flashing the glass in that way.-Does he think there are no eyes in the castle yonder sharp enough to see that the reflection is not from the water? Here, Catty, bring me your looking-glass! Be quick, or that owlish lover of yours will have the Philistines upon him.

. The young woman he called to was lying beside a fire which was burning on the shore a few yards behind him. She jumped up instantly, ran into the tent, and returned with a small round looking-glass, which she handed to the captain, who immediately directed it towards the sun, and sent stream of intense light across the sea in the direction of a boat, which was only just visible from where he stood. The signals from the boat were not renewed; and after

ing the castle which he possessed; and if he than a similarity of interest. On the part had lived in it all his days, and his days had of the man it might have been nothing than a similarity of interest. On the part been as many as those of Methuselsh, and more than a feeling of brotherly regard; but he had been a witness of the landing of the deep-red flush which glowed in her Cuear on the part of the island where it cheek, and the moist brightness which stands, I doubt whether he could have been darkseed the always dark eyes of the girl, showed that the feeling of affection with which she regarded him was very strong indeed. As she was a principal instrument in the plot which was being organized, it is necessary to say that she had not only the beauty which is conferred by the possess of regular features, dark-brown eyes, sur-mounted by narrow, arched, well-defined black eyebrows, a small mouth with full rosy lips, and a mass of black ourls which rested on her shoulders and back; but she had, in addition, that attractive expres which seems to spring from a growing sciousness of beauty, and a sense of mysterious happiness to be enjoyed in the uture, the precise nature of which is unown to the maiden who is just entering womanhood. The adventurous roving life she had been accustomed to, being natural to her, had merely given her a confident bearing, without that air of effrontery which would have been perceptible had she quitted a different aphere to enter on a gipsy's life

By the time breakfast was finished, the boat, with Turner and two other mon, was sounding Plate Boque; and as soon as she was made fast, one of them filled a basket with fish and went away in the direction of Mont Organii Castle; while the other two, having filled a second basket, carried it to the gipsy encampment, as though their ob-ject was simply to trade with the gipsies. Turner was one of the latter; the other was a gipsy belonging to the gang, and not a his enemies in England, and waiting the regular boatman. Captain Whitehead adurn of the gipsy-girl Catty. This girl, vanced to meet Turner, and the two sat down on a rock at some distance from the gipey tent. The captain was the first to

"Well, Turner," he began eagerly, " have you arranged with Clinton where he is to lie with the brig ?" " Yes."

"And he thoroughly understands the instructions I gave you for him with respect to the signals?"

"I suppose so. He told me I should know the position of his vessel by seeing three lanterns one above the other, and I was to steer for them if anything happened to you; that as regarded the other signals you might reckon on his keeping a sharp look-

"What else did he say?"

"That on Sunday night he would lie off the castle as short a distance from the outermost rock as would keep the brig safe and allow him to set all sail at an instant's notice without risk of striking. Also, that he would have a boat manned, and ready to push off from the side the moment he saw the signal you had mentioned."

"That part of the business is settled, then." Now, let me tell you what has been done since you salled; for no time must now h lost in making the grand stroke which will make us rich if successful, and, what I care for most, give me a chance of paying off an old score.

"To tell you the truth, I wish you were going into the business without having any old score on your mind. Those things only blind the judgment at the critical moment; though I cannot deny that it is apt to suggest ingenious schemes for effecting the de sired object."

"May the-Well, there is no use in talking of that now. Catty is admitted into the castle to sing and dance whenever she guardians he is too much afraid of to disobey, who objected. However, a king never wants tools, and there is a young fellow among the soldiers who has saked her repeatedly to come up, on the nights when he count of the smallness of the garrison-as private apartment."

"But how will that assist your scheme?" "In this way. You know there is a low seaward side of the tower which faces the sea?" (Turner made a sign in the affirmative.) That door opens on a staircase which leads up to a little cell, and passing through a door which opens into this cell you enter a narrow passage, from which there is a short staircase, leading right into the room which Charles uses as a sleeping-room. Catty is as surefooted as a goat, and she will manage to get the man to let her in by this door, un der the pretence that she is not likely to be seen by her people in that case. Any excuse will do, especially as it will suit him better than letting her in by the postern."

"And has Catty agreed to do this?" inter-

know; and you see how easy our adventure

parapet as an eligible spot from which to support the view and his hook, and at the same familiar manner, as though she were a child, approached the fire where the herealthet was a stranger—or, perhaps because I was a stranger—to him, he is itself, that which told of a confidence before the information concerns the search which he conserve the two based on something stronger along the road, the more effectually that the sight of persons who might happen to pass along the road, the more effectually that the distance between them was quite half-a-mile. Besides Captain Whitehead, there were present Turner, seven gipeles, and an Eng-lishman who had been landed in Boulay Bay from the brig. It was in consequence of the message brought by this man that the been sent to say that the wind was so favorable for a run to England, and would probably continue to blow so steadily from the neat Clinton thought it would be a great pity if advantage were not taken of it, particuif advantage were not taken of it, particu-larly as at that season of the year the con-trary wind blew so much more frequently. The commander of the brig, in anticipation that his suggestion would be adopted, like-wise seat word that he would come round the island at sunset, and would be on the lookout for the signal on the Whale Rook; to which point he would send a boat with well-armied men on board as soon as the red light was shown, and would hoist the lan-terns on beard the brig sa'arranged.

Captain Whitshead had explained the plan by means of which he proposed they should enter the castle. The information he had got through the gipsy-girl relative to the way in which the interior of the tower was built and occupied, seemed to make the enterprize he had undertaken so easy of execution that there was accreely anything execution that there was scarcely anything to be said beyond this. There were no difficulties to smooth over, no objections to be met, and no arguments to be invented with the view of making the undertaking appear more facile than it really was. They were sitting in almost perfect silence therefore, probably meditating on the gain which each would derive from the delivery of Charles to turn of the gipsy-girl Catty. This girl, though kind-hearted and thoughtless enough at ordinary times, had thrown herself into the furtherance of the plot with all the energy and zeal which characterises her sex when engaged in schemes, in the successful result of which not only their vanity is concerned, but the desire to receive the appro bation of the man they love—a desire which is greatest when they have the most doubt whether that man loves them. It was late in the afternoon before the girl was seen waving the bandkerchief she had taken from her head from a rock about midway between them and the shore. Captain Whitehead went first towards her; and the others, after waiting a few minutes, followed him though they took different ways to reach the same spot, and appeared to be scarching for something as they went with great care and attention. After a brief conversation with the gipsy-girl, Captain Whitehead told the others, when they had all arrived, that nothing would be changed in the manner of carrying out the enterprize from what had been already planned. The night was as dark as it could be close to the sea on a calm night, where it is never entirely dark. The conspirators had no difficulty in getting to the foot of the castle unoticed. The girl Catty came alone along the road which runs from St. Clement's Bay, and, passing round the foot of the rock on which the castle is built, began at once to seend it towards the door in an oblique direction-a gentle stroke of the hands together being the only signal she gave to her ecomplices of her arrival. It required great care to make but slow progress, on account of the steepness of the rock; nevertheless, she was closely followed by Captain White head, who was followed by Turner, the gipsies creeping after each other in succession The girl drew herself up against the door. and waited till the captain whispered to her in a low voice to knock, he himself halting by the curvature of the wall in the event of the soldier taking the precaution to peep out before removing the whole of the fasten ings. This caution on the part of the leader of the conspirators was not unnecessary: is on duty-which is pretty often, on ac- for, as you will see if you are not afraid to descend the rotten staircase, there is a stout Charles is anxious to see her dance in his chain which is long enough to allow the door to be opened a few inches without its removal from the book. As if somebody had been standing behind the iron-plated door about five feet from the rock on the door waiting for this sound, it was no sooner heard than there was a creaking of bolts, succeeded by a low rattling of the links of a chain. A short silence followed, and the girl could just distinguish the face of the young soldier who had acted as the medium of communication between her and Charles. A moment more and the door was gently opened. She stepped quickly on the three hold, and before it could be closed again, she had, with Dalilah-like treachery, thrown her arms round the young man, and forced him gently back against the wall. It is not unlikely that he, having no reason to believe that she was a Lucretia, put the interpretation on her action most flattering to his selfrupted Turner, eagerly.

"Oh, you need not be alarmed on the have suspected treachery, and in the score of her morals," answered the other, thoughts of deceiving his master was as The moment the door is opened for her to | quiet as the conspirators could desire. He enter we jump in after her. The rest you did not remain long in this fool's-paradise; for a dark figure which knelt beside the girl, gleam was visible in the darkness, and the grid sit the men she was eleming in her could hide himself. On reaching the arms alide greatly from them to the greated without uttering a sound. A deed like this had not entered her thoughts, and she turned hastily, and without heeding the himself come, and then discovered castion whispered into her ear, began to descend the rocks, taking the direction opposite to that by which the men of her tribe

The captain having satisfied himself that Turner was close behind him, concluded that the others also were following, and that the others also were following, may began to ascend the staircase leading to Charles's room. Holding a dagger in his hand, the captain crept quietly up the nar-row winding stairs; so quietly, that if Charles heard him, he might well have im-agined that it was morely his agent, and the falling; but, as he turned his head to look at him, he heard the inarticulate sound which his people were accustomed to use

when an enemy was by, and he then saw that a man was following them at three or four yards' distance. Conceiving that the intention of this man was to get into the pression that he was a member of the tribe. and to secure the door, so as to catch then all like rats in a trap when he had given the alarm to the garrison, the gipsy and the one who followed him halted on the lower stair, the former removing one of his garments with the view of throwing it over the man's head, and preventing him from crying out. This plan partially succeeded; but the Englishman, though taken by surprise, and almost suffocated, struggled furiously against his two assailants; and though he was prevented from calling aloud, and eventually forced to succumb beneath the Ill-directed blows of their daggers, he did not die unavenged, for one of them fell beneath him, and lay there, moaning out his soul in the strange accents of a language unintelligible to all but those of his own race. Before the captain had hardly received this explanation both voices were silent, and he continued his way upwards. It had not occupied a minute, but when he reached the bedroom he was just too late to capture the occupant. who having heard the sounds, though he believed they were caused by the young soldier and the girl, was too eager to receive the latter to remain seated, and had approached the head of the stairs to listen. Something at the last moment excited his suspicion, and he ran across the room to im at the very moment Cap tain Whitehead stepped into the chamber. The captain glanced round him and saw a shadow vanishing up the opposite stairs. He rushed recklessly after it, pursued everything but the accomplishment of the object he had in view, and not diverted from the direct line taken by the unfortunate man who was destined so often in his younger the tower, and finding himself in the open have concealed himself in some recess on the body of the building occupied by the soldiers and the prince's friends and attend-Charles could not have escaped by that way. first drawn to it I was conversing with an old gentleman, who had selected the lower grasping a handful of the curls which hung on the day preceding that originally fixed suddenly thrust its arm upwards, a dull the staircase, but from the bottom to the jokes and noisy pastimes, of what he had ting it except by the very in which is himself come, and then it which is was critically a trap dead; though of a opened on a opened on a selection of the case, he could not make the case, he charlen's room. Holding a degger in his hand, the captain crept quietly up the narrow winding stairs; so quietly, that if the charlen's heard him, he might well have imprised that it was merely his agent, and the girl whose presence he was expecting. Suddenly the ellence was broken by the sound of dull blows, as though a body was being violently driven against thick timber or stone. Etified cries for help, which, though this, were carried up the passage as along a tube, and into the cull where I have told you. Frymse was imprisented, and from this right as if to help the person of those behind him. Low ground mingled with ejeculations, in a tengue which he knew to be the gipty dislect, but could not understand, accorded to the ear, and with these cases the more familiar tone of an English voice, faintly besecoking for help.

Allarmed for the success of his enterprise by these sounds, he was pussiled as to what had happened, and undecided whether to advance or retreat while there yet seemed the room had only a presence of cutting through the chain, for he seemed to be anwing at had happened, and undecided whether to advance or retreat while there yet seemed the room had only a presence of cutting through the chain, for he seemed to be anwing at the chain, for he seemed to be anwing at the chain, for he seemed to be anwing at the chain, for he seemed to be anwing at the chain, for he seemed to be anwing at the chain, for he seemed to be anwing at the chain, for he seemed to be anwing at the chain, for he seemed to be anwing at the chain, for he seemed to be anwing at the chain, for he seemed to be anwing at the chain, for he seemed to be anwing at the chain, for he seemed to be anwing at the chain, for he seemed to be anwing at the chain, for he seemed to be anwing at the chain, for he seemed to be anwing at the chain, for he seemed to be advance or retreat while there yet seemed to be a seemed to be anwing at the chain. From this state of indecision he was to defeat an attempt to sever it, as the chain the chain had happened, and undecided whether to sidvance or retreat while there yet seemed time. From this state of indecision he was released by the hindmost of the gang of gipsies, who finding that those above him were motionies, guessed the reason, and was provided ready to be hooked to it, that the chain had been fixed. Unfortuwere motionies, guessed the reason, and sliently pushed his way past the others, till he reached Captain Whitehead, to whom in a few words he explained what had taken nately, Charles had not the time to set the ladder even if it had been at he place. He, himself, had been the last but one to enter the lower, and just before he reached it, the gipsy behind him had caughthold of his ankle. At first he supposed that he had done so merely to save himself from which it was not, as such a pressing emer gency had never been foreseen. The cap taln next tried to seize the chain, but his fingers barely reached the staple which held it to the wall. Baffled and enraged, he pulled furiously at one of the blocks of stone which formed the coping; and Charles, who could just distinguish the setion, must have suffered the sgonies of death at the thought that it was intended to dash it down upon his head. He still, however, clung desperately to the chain, know-ing that he would become a mere mass of mangled fiesh if he loosed his hold, and believing that if he accepted the help of his enemies to return to the platform he would perial beneath the blows of their daggers. All that I have described as following his discovery had only occupied the shortest possible space of time. At the first moment error and surprise deprived him of the vec of his voice, if not of his reason; but the action of Captain Whitehead seemed to give him vigor to cry out. His cries, however, uttered in the open air, at such a beight, and outside the walls of the castle, were unheard by the garrison. It was while these things were being encted on the top of the castle, that a soldier of the garrison who had been visiting his friends was returning towards it. The greater part of the road which now runs from St. Martin's down to the beach youder, south of the castle, was in existence then; but the shortest way, and that usually taken by persons coming to the castle in the daytime, was reputed to be haunted, and it was very eldom indeed that anybody came that way after nightfall. It so happened that this soldier was an Englishman, named Cooper, native of Amesbury, in Wiltshire; and it was perhaps from his familiarity with the grand Druidic ruins of Stonehenge that he felt a kind of contempt for the ghosts which the staircase which led up to the top of could dwell in the insignificant ruins, attrithe tower, and then turned round to look buted to that priesthood, which the natives any rate, instead of taking the broader road he took the path which skirted these ruins. saw that it was empty, but as he did so, he and while passing along, and occasionally throwing a side glance at them, he saw a red light burning on one of the rocks furby his accomplices; but, active as he was, thest from the shore. He stopped to look he could not travel so fast as the man he at it, wondering what it could mean. It pursued, who not only had the advantage of was not a fire-its vivid color and the steadibeing familiar with the passage, but was ness with which it burned showed that. He much more lightly clothed. Heedless of went on a few steps and it was hidden; then he came back and it was still there. He again changed his position; and though the red light was invisible, his eye was drawn to three ordinary lights shining one above days to experience the bitterness of being the other, which, from the manner in which haunted like a wild beast, he stumbled on. they rose and fell, he saw immediately were On arriving on the platform at the top of on board a vessel. If he had seen the latter alone, he would have thought nothing of it, air, he looked eagerly about him, fully ex- because it was a common thing for the pecting to see Charles before him, helpless, fishing vessels when they lay off the coast and utterly unable to offer resistance. To all night to hoist lights, which enabled those his great surprise not a human being was on shore to say what particular vessel it visible. No search was necessary, for the was; but taken along with the colored space was so very small, and moreover there light, the like of which he had never seen was nothing there which could serve as a in the island, be fancied it might have screen or hiding-place. Imagining he must some meaning which he and his comrades were interested in discovering. No sooner stairs, the captain descended to the bed-room. had this idea entered his head, than he He found the door opening from it into the pushed on as fast as he could along a path which was both rough and obscure, till he reached the gate of the castle. Dianta, still barred. It was evident, therefore, rectly he was admitted he told the soldiers, who were amusing themselves after the ou were stilling, drinking and old them. Some of these it did not concern the garrier oughs it did; and as assering the happened to be the principal officer, at to season's the commander of the ad who was sitting with the few who resided here with Charles. reach this room he had to pass the door rhich opened into his royal master's sleepand in doing so he stood still a and levened. He heard the low aur of voices, but that was all, and he is on his way. After he had told what oper had seen, somebody present asked are the prince was. Another answere at he had gone to be! with the headach respon the efficur who had come with s news said that he had heard some per-ms talking in his room as he passed it. So le, that everybody looked about him, perpetved simultaneously that no perseral rising; some drew their swords es took up axes or other weapons equally effective in a close fight, and all made way to the door of Charles's room. One of them knocked, but there was no newer. He knocked again and louder, but still no response; all was silent as we be-

Alarmed by this, a nobleman present sug-ment that it would be well to go up to the of the castle, and descend by the stairwhich opened into Charles's room The suggestion was followed without any-body speaking. One after the other they ed the stairs which led to the summit the noise of their own feet drowning all external sounds till they halted to unfasten the bolts which secured the trap-door, which was the same Captain Whitehead had in vain tried to raise from the outside. Then going forward arose in their minds. The were hastly drawn back, the door dashed violently upwards, and each man sprang on the platform with the sgillty of tiger. The group of conspirators were so intently occupied in watching or aiding the efforts of Captain Whitehead to detach stone, that three or four of Charles's friends were on the platform and had heard his eries for help before they were perceived. The conspirators had no time to consider whether to fight or fly, for the cavallers were upon them, hewing and striking almost at random. The struggle was a momentary one, the conspirators being either forced over the parapet and crushed by their fall on the rocks below, or struck to the ground and left for dead. Captain Whitebead and Turner were the only two who made what could be termed a resistance, but the latter was soon overcome; a blow from an axe fell on his forehead, and the blood reshed into his eyes. He made a feeble at tempt to press it out with the fingers of his left hand, but while in the act of doing it he received stabs and blows sufficient to have destroyed life in an elephant. The leader of the conspirators sold his life at a dearer rate; but he, too, fell like the rest before the number of his assailants. In the meantime some of the cavaliers, as soon as they per ceived the position of the prince, had been engaged in rescuing him, which was not a matter with the aid of the rope ladder. He had managed to get his foot in the ring, and thus sustained himself without much fatigue; but his hands were bruised and bleeding from the way in which they had been crushed between the chain and the wall. Not withstanding his wounds, and the effects of the terror he must have felt, he did not suffer himself to be taken down the stairs till he had examined the faces of the dead men who lay on the platform. On seeing the face of the man known as Capput saide from the rest, and the next day he cted it to be taken to the nearest church-

ref of t

I think (concluded the old gentleman,) that you will agree with me, that this was one of the narrowest escapes Charles ever had. But this is not the only way in which that chain is connected with the prince. Years afterwards, Dean Bandinel and his son, who were charged with being acce ies to the murder of his father, Charles I. were sent here as prisoners; and in their at ot to escape, by means of a rope fastened to that same chain, one was dashed to death and the other dreadfully maimed.

As to the fate of the beautiful gipey-girl Tregret to say I have no sure information her she died of a broken heart, which is likely, or took to telling fortunes like the rest of her tribe, is a question which proba-bly must over remain undecided. Tost Charles Steart profited by the lesson he had received, is, bowever, very doubtful-he mover got over the insanity engendered by a pretty Inc. face, and the madness created by

An eccentric man in Bath (Ma.) was had to contribute to foreign missions. He are a quarter of a dollar, but stopped the ne he was departing, and said: "Bere's far to pay the expense of getting the

Carrainant.—I love these little per

SANITARY COMMISSION DEPARTMENT

Women's PRESENTATION BRANCE, 1807 Chestres St., Philadelphia.

M. CALER Corn, Tressurer, N. H Corner Sigth and Miner St., Phi

Sub-Committee on Correspondence

GRIER, CA'rm'n. MOORE, Cor. Sec. OR PLETT, Hec. Sec. Mrs. Guonou Pleys Mrs. W. H. Punns

Miss M. M. DUANE. Mrs PHORES M. CLAPP, Assis, Sci

Your Executive Committee has the he to report too receipt of the following supplice during the mouth of December :-

pites during the mouth of December:—

609 cottou shirts, 356 wool shirts, 43 canted flamed shirts, 356 pairs cotton drawers, 356 pairs cotton drawers, 356 pairs wool drawers, 356 pairs wool drawers, 357 shorts, 130 pairs anippers, 907 handserchieft, 37 shorts, 130 pillow, 351 pillow ticks and eases, 350 bed ticks, 167 pade and cushions, 150 towels, 151 needle cases, 350 pairs conton flamed drawers, 35 pairs mittens, 39 quitts, 149 arm siings, 14 blankets, 37 vents, 35 pairs paulaloom, 35 costs, 468 page, farina, de., 6 bla. pointon, 4 bbla. regestables, 14 bbls. dried fruit, 8 bbls. appies, 13 bbls. cranberries, 190 lbs. segar, 135 lbs. butter, 35 cans ant. best, 65 lbs. secon and shocolate, 31 cose coffee, 5 harrels pickles, 9 kegs pickles, 75 bottles pickles, 365 jars preserves and jeilles, 67 bottles grup, 16 bottles wins, 36 bottles tradity and whiskey, 15 bottles art singer, 253/4 lbs. cracters, 9 piece dried best, 16 hans, 115 lbs. best, 8 kags appie butter, 45 lbs. soop, 179 lbs. seesange and scrappel, 150 lbs. wheat four, 46 hair brushes.

Also books, papers, games, groseries,

Also books, papers, games, groseries chickens, lint, bandages, old linen and mus

We have received in all 225 packages, 36 oxes and 13 barrels have been sent to Washington, 6 boxes to New York, 287 boxes, 18 barrels, 9 kegs remain in store, besides a good present supply upon the shelves. The requisitions of the Department Hospitals have been filled, and a great deal has been lessed for "ance al relief" in the cases of individual soldiers applying. both those discharged and in the service Liberal supplies have also been sent to the Soldiers' Home, recently established in our city, and the Soldiers' Reading Room has not been forgotten.

Our report for the month of December has brought us to an important epoch—the close of another year. It has been to many of us a year of toil, but the rewards of tha toil have been rich and abundant. What true American woman would prefer a life ease or self-indulgence to this work which yields such heartfelt satisfaction The President of the Sanitary Commission said on a public occasion; "The hearts of our country.women would break were their hands not permitted to labor in some way in the great cause of the nation." Have w this holy shrine their costlicat offerings while the hearts of some even wept tha they had nothing to give, no sacrifice to make the call to arise and work for those who had gone to the field, came like the voice of comfort. Who does not remember that first hour of consecration, when we re solved that for our dear country's sake we would hold nothing too precious to be given in her cause. Time, case, comfort, wealth, what were they? We felt them to be no thing. Our nation's life was at stake; all we loved was embarked in the struggle We gave ourselves, our hands, our hearts our all, praying that God would show in what to do, and "establish the work of our hands upon us," and He has done this. The burden and heat of the day are upon us The old duty of steady, constant effort for the soldiers in the field is ever present, but in addition to that, a new and important work is gradually developing itself, and will on assume gigantic proportions.

Disabled men, worn out in the cause, are returning home, honorably discharged from the country's service. The pensions cannot sared at once; they are often unfit fo work, sometimes they cannot procure it There comes to them an interval of want and suffering. They need food and clothing, and they come with their wants, as most soldiers do, to that good friend of the soldier-the Sanitary Commission. What is to be done with these heroes who have bled in the glorious cause? Will you let them suffer? Rather will you not make the Sanitary Commission abundantly able to meet this urgent call upon it, which is be coming more imperative every day. It is merely your steward-holding in trust for the soldiers of the Union the free offerings of a grateful people. Will you place at its disposal all the stores it needs? Remember that the work is your own. The Commis sion is merely your agent for doing it. Will it not gladden your hearts to know that through your liberality, it is enabled to give comfort to the sick and dying soldler, who having been discharged, has passed beyond the reach of the military hospital, with its appliances? Buch work the Sanitary Commission has done, is doing. Will you no by the sending of largely increased supplie from every county give to these suffering eroes, to yourselves, and to us, the promi of a " Happy new year?"

Respectfully subs

MARIA C. GRIER,

eting of the Executive Come e of the Women's Ponestvania Brance of the United States Sanitary Commission held January 4th, the following Associate lanagers were appointed:— Miss Sussa Myer, Towards, Ps. Mrs. Hillman, Ourlisle, Pa. Miss Jace Hand, Cape May Court Hou

New Jersey. Miss Linzie Adema, Miffligtown, Pa.

DONATIONS.

The Women's Penn. Braceh, United States de itary Commission, No. 1307 Chestant street detrowledge the receipt of the following do ations in hospital supplies store the last re ottegrove, Northumberland on, 1 b Aid, Springville, Susquehanna eo. lenwood Lenox, Susquehanna eo., 8 bt ox; Masers. Hart & Co., 416 South 15 hurch, Mrs. Bucknell, 1 pag., ocks and mittens, knitted from Sec. Com. crisi; Ladies' Aid, Springfield, Del. co., 2 bad 1 pkg.; M. K. L., clothing Ladies' and 1 pkg.; M. K. L., clothing Ladies'. terial; Ladise' Aid, Springfield, Del. co., 2 bbla. and 1 pkg.; M. K. L., clothing; Ladise' Aid, Brochlyn, Susquehama ec., 1 box; Ladise' Aid, Brochlyn, Susquehama ec., 1 box; Ladise' Aid, Rik Laks. 1 box and 1 bbl.; a friend te the soldier, clothing; Chatham Aid, Avondale, 1 box; Archer & Reaves, 2 bbls. pickles; Women's Industrial Branch, Miss E. H. Haven, See'y, clothing; Westfield Aid, Burlington co., N. J., 1 bbl.; Hillegrove Ald, Sallivan ec., 2 boxes, 1 tubbutter; Belefonts, Centre ec., 1 box; Mrs. Jamedon, 1836 Sprace st., 10 pairs wool socks; Ledies' Aid, Little Mendows, Susq. co., 1 bbl.; Sunbury, Pa., 1 box; Solliers' Aid, Upper Frovidence and Edgemont, Del. co., 1 box; Aid Society, New Egypt and Jacobstown, Ocean co., N. J., 1 box; Ladies' Aid, Danville, Mentour eo., 1 demijoha raspberry vinegar; Ladies' Aid, per Saml. Bradford, 7 gus chades; Lacies' Aid, Morrisville, Bucks co., 1 bbl; Millville, Cumberland co., N. J., 1 box; Soldiers' Aid, Church of our Saviour, West Phita., 1 ph; Union Relief, Norristown, Pa., 1 keg; East Freedom, Blair co., Mrs. C. G. Butler, See'y, 1 box; Soldiers' Aid, North West, Mrs. H. F. Birkenbine, Pres., large quantity of clothing; Ladies' Aid, Bellefonte, Centre co., 1 box; New Egypt and Jacobstown, Ocean co., N. J., 1 box; Chatham Aid, Avondale, Chester co., 2 boxes; New Milford Aid, 1 box; Clarence and Lillie Moore, 1 box; Mrs. Geo. Pitt, 1 pkg.

POPPING THE QUESTION.

We have heard of many cases of "popping" under very singular circumstances the eccentric the abrupt the business-like the silly, and a hundred other styles. Of the eccentric, we could cite the case of a well-known merchant, who, one day dining at a friend's house, sat next to a lady who possessed rare charms of conversation. The nerchant did not possess this faculty in very rare degree, but be could do that which was next best, he could appreciate, an appreciation which he endeavored to show by the following mode of action:

"Do you like toast, Miss B-

"Yes," responded the lady, slightly sur orised at the question.

Buttered toast?"

"That is strange; so do I. Let us ge astried."

There cannot be much doubt that the lady was taken slightly aback, a feet that did not prevent the marriage from coming off in a month afterwards, nor the ac ression of the lady to one of the finest establish ments in the city. As a specimen of the abrupt, we shall cite the case of a gentleman who had retired from business at the age of forty, and built himself a beautiful house, determined to er joy life to the utmost. One day s friend was dining with him and said half jokingly:

"You have everything here that the heart an desire but a wife.

"That's true. I must think of it," then relapsed into silence for a few minutes. at the end of which time he rose, begged to be excused for a short time, and left the room. He seized his hat and went instantly to with the information that neither the master nor mistress were at home. He told the servant that he wanted neither, and requested that the housekeeper be sent to him. She came, and the gentleman thus address

"Sarah, I have known you for many years, and I have just been told that I want wife. You are the only woman I know that I should be willing to entrust my happiness with, and if you agree, we will be in-instantly married. What is your answer?"

Sarah knew the man that addressed her, and knew that his offer was serious, and as well weighed as though considered for a year, and she answered him in the same

"I agree."

" Will you be ready in an hour !"

" I will." "I shall return for you at that time."

Which he did, the gentleman who had aggested the idea accompanying him to the ergyman's. Many years have passed since en, and neither party has seen asy can to regret the abrupt proposal and accept-

Of the business style, we can cite a case related to us, which we know for a true one. A young man who had succeeded to the ill-kept and badly cultivated, though really valuable farm of a deceased uncle, saw at a glance that two things were abo the first being a wife to take charge of the oman's department, and the second a few thousand dollars to stock it with. He could not help thinking to himself that, possibly, these two great side to his happin prosperity might be found together, and yet ut attempting to put his matrim and financial ideas into practice, he allowed hom to haunt him continually,

With this upon his mind, our farmer tarted upon a horsehade journey to a dis ant part of the country, and upon his rearn made an acquaintance upon the road to the person of an old goutleman whe was jogging the same way. The commions dised together at a wayeld nd fraternized pleasantly, during which the young man opened his heart to elder, telling him all his plane and aspirations, when the old gentleman addre the younger:

"I rather like you, my friend, and your post way of telling your story, and if you will come and see me, I shall be glad. I have three daughters, all as good girls as ever lived. Now, perhaps, one of them may will do my best toward making the balance of the matter agreeable. Ride over and see me to-morrow, take disner, and stay the afternoon, which will give you a fair charee to see them and judge,

The young man instantly agreed to the proposal, making only a condition that the young ladies should not be informed of the nature of his errand. This was agreed to, and they separated.

The next day, at the time appointed, the roung man dismounted at the door of the use of his new made friend, and was heartily welcomed. The hour before din ner was consumed in looking over the farm the young man in admiring its keeping, and the old one in approving of the sensible and practical remarks of the younger, when the meal was announced, and the three young ladies and their mother were introluced. They were all, as the old gentle man had said, fine girls, but the younger, rosy-cheeked, blue-eyed, and laughing faced, charmed the young farmer especially The dinner over, they once more walke out for a chat.

"Well, how do you like my daughters was the old gentleman's first question

They are all nice girls, very nice," sai the young man, thoughtfully. "And which of them do you like best was the next question. The youngest, Kate, she is charming and if I am to be your son-in-law, you mus give me Kate !" "This will never do to take the younges and by all odds toe prettiest," said the old gentleman, seriously. "I must have her or none," was the re sponse, spoken decidedly. "How much money did you say yo vanted?"

"Five thousand dollars will put my farm in excellent order, and make it worth twenty thousand to morrow. I must have five thou and dollars." "I'll give you the sum with either of th ther girls," said the old man, positively but I will give but three thousand with

"Then I may as well go to my home .-Five thousand I must have-I have set my mind upon it."

"And I have just as strongly determined to do only what I have said," was the old gentleman's reply; "so I suppose the mat ter is at an end. However, we will be good friends, and you must sometimes run over and see me.

This ended the conference and they part ed. The young man mounted his horse and rode down toward the road, but just as he was about opening the gate, stooping from his saddle, the laughing faced Kate sprang through the shrubbery to save him the trouble.

"Yes, by George I will, if you say so, was the instantaneous response

"Then come over to-morrow morning before ten o'clock and tell him so," and the girl vanished like a fairy among the

The young man rode slowly home, but be ras on hand next morning, according to bidding, and married the fair Kate in two months after.

As a specimen of the absurd, we cannot do better than cite a case that occurred within our own jurisdiction, in a country village of Massachusetta. There was a cortain Zachariah Peebles, a stout, industrious sober and bashful farm-hand, a resident of that locality. Zack was celebrated not for what he did say, but for what he did not, his silence being a metter of marvel through all that chattering neighborhood. Zack, with all his taciturnity, was not proof agains the shafts of love, and one day was smitter with the wholesome charms of the only child of the widow Brown, a bright-eyed, goodlooking girl, possessing the same trait of silence as Zack, though not in so eminent a

The first time Zack showed his admire tion for Sally was by selsing up a large bas ket of cow-feed she was about to carry into the stables, and hurrying thither in a frightened way, much as though be was taking it from a burning house. After that Zack seemed to be perpetually on the watch for opportunities to save the fair Sally from avier work. These delicate aventions could not fail to attract the attention of the roungs man, invited him into the house to pand the evening, and from that time Zack eas a fixity. He would sit in the shimme corner of the old-fashioned house, searce ever speaking, dividing his attention equally between the fire and fracting his eyes t Sally. For two years this quiet adoration went on, and the neighbors wondered why as there was nothing to prevent it, they did not marry. It never has been known whe ther the idea arose out of Zack's own brain or whether it was a hint from a friend, but at lest be did find courage to pop the ques-tion. It was done in this way. The time was New Year Eve, and the fair Sally had been preparing a stout jug of mulled cider that she might have something to obser Zack's beart when he came in. Eack came, he drank, and took his accustomed seat i the chimney corner, where he sat quietly as usual for a few minutes, and then, with any previous symptoms, he some up to his full height, six feet and two inches, pu his head up the chimney so that but little o him was seen above the walst, and delivered

" If somebody loved somebody as well as somebody loves somebody, somebody would marry somebody.

the following oration:

Zack remained with his head up the chim ney after this speech, silent as death, for some minutes, until he came forth from his place of refuge at the express solicitation of Widow Brown, with a face glowing like the setting sun. The thing was done, however, and Zack and Sally were married in a few weeks after, and we are convinced that if either of them could be induced to talk, now, after a trial of a dozen years, they would say that they were entirely satisfied with that mode of popping the question.

Among the oddities of the mystery, the one over which we have personally wondered much occurred in Philadelphia, within eur own knowledge.

A lady and gentleman, who had been acquainted but one week, and who move in the very first circles, were walking upon the street, the lady showing the lions of the city to the gentleman, who was a stranger in Philadelphia. In the course of their ramble they were stopped by a wedding party, who were alighting from their carriages at church door. The lady proposed to go in and see the affair through. The gentleman consented, and together they stood till the ceremony was over. At the instant the gentleman, taking the lady's hand in his, led her unresistingly to the altar, without a single word spoken, and presented her to the astonished minister, with the request that they should be made one. In ten minutes the knot was tied, and we have no reason to believe that either have in the ten years they have been joined, seen cause to regret the suddenness of the idea.

The manners of the Brazilians, ac ording to a recent traveller, are but so so, even smoog the highest ranks. In Ric ladies of quality amuse themselves by spitting from their balconies on the heads of the foot-passengers below. Doubtful.

JOKING -Never risk a loke, even th east offensive in its nature and the mos common, with a person who is not well

When Algernon Sidney was told bat he might save his life by telling a false bood-by denying his hand writing-h mid:-" When God has brought me into dilemma in which I must assert a lie or los my life, He gives me a clear indication of my duty, which is to prefer death to false

A collector presenting a bill to She ridan, for the hundredth time, apologized for its soiled and tattered appearance. tell you what I'd advise you to do, my write it on parchment."

DID I but purpose to embark with thee, On the smooth surface of a summer sea, While gentle sepbyrs play with prosperor gales,

And fortune's favor fills the swelling sails; But could forsake the ship and make the shore When the winds whistle, and the tempests road Ah, no! One common oath has tied Our loves. One destiny our life shall guide : Nor wild, nor deep, our way divide.-Prior.

BHORT SERMONS - Peter the Great when at Saardam wished to hear a rather famous preacher. The latter consented to preach before the Czer. Having ascended the pulpit, he said, with solemnity and dignity, "Think well; speak well; and act well. Amen." Luther's counsel to a candidate was contained in these words: "Go boldly into the pulpit, open your mouth like a man, and be brief."

A devont philosopher, no doubt anz lous to instruct his fellow-men in true happiness, has given the world a distich worthy of universal application :-

"When I from my slumbers rise, My first prayer in the morn is, Oh, keep me from the devil, Lord, But chiefly from attornies!"

PEARL BOUQUETS -The last novelty in the flower world is bouque's made of mo ther-of-pearl, that sparkies like jewels. Th pearly part of the shell is separated in strips as thin as paper, and with these layers from-bling out and wheat cars are especially well

A Reminiscence of the Pit

A Warwickshire lady, who has he ourneyed many miles on the pillion hair is white with age, and to whom of the early Regency period, and the in which "Bony" was held before the fall of Waterloo had been dyed with bleed have the privilege of listening, told me following incident, which occurr her own observation. I repeat, as as I can remember them, her own we

OFB&1

what able rary, the p ing 1

-fash -infli

eye.

is o

-coal

WAY

cies

duri

and

cate

tive

hab

pep

thei

alw

plan

whe

-th

aoth

atte

retu

Foll

of i thos

gisa

ful

cent

nob

who

T

bon cock

Nov

bay of t

thes

80 1

eve

tabl

DOS

lida

thef

got ber " th at a

"In 1808, I went into Le great farm-bouse to spend the Obi holidays. A purty was arranged for Year's Evo. A severe frost had laste Year's Eve. A person and toward its close e my seavy fall of snow had taken place, a the roads were many feet deep, but the continuing after the fall, it got very and hard. My uncle's farm was in a le part of the country, and many of the m pected guests having to come from a guestistance, we were afraid they would be made able to make the journey. Travelling to was not like it is now, and cross comb lanes were awkward places. We was have dinner at three o'clock, and everytely who came was to stay all night. Among the expected guests were a cousin of mi young lady in whom be had a spec est. About three o'clock we were there fore a good deal surprised when he rode into

"Where is Sarah ?' cried one "'How is it Miss Whitlock hasn't come? asked another, as the new arrival de-

"He had lost her on the read. It may seem strange to you who don't know what pillion-riding was, that a man could less his weetheart from behind him and know me thing about it; but such instances are me rare, and sure enough John had lost he Two horses were brought out of the stable and saddled, the lover remounted, any they all three galloped to look for the mi ing lady, leaving us in no mood to do setting but speculate by the fireside on the fortune of the lady, for the snow was vary deep, and they had had to come across a queer country lanes. It very soon got dails, and the snow began to fall again. We was all very miserable as hour after hour west by, and they did not return. It was to o'clock before any one of the three came to us, and then she was not found. He had only come to know if she had got to us by auy means. She had not gone back home. It was so dark they could not see, and the mow would have covered her over. John was riding up and down the way he had come, and shouting 'Barah! Barah!' at the top of his voice in a state of frenzy. Lanterns were provided, and as no more horse were to be had, all the other men who had come to the party started off on foot in the cold snow to look for Sarah. About midnight they found the pillion, and by the all of the lanterns, though it was very slow work, for the new-fallen snow had almest obliterated her footmarks, they tracked Sarah, as poschers track poor hares under similar circumstances, to a cottage a mile and a-half from the place where she had fallen. The new year had been born some hours when we got this intelligence, and instead of a merry party we had passed a pretty miserable night between our fears for Sarah and the absence of the gentlemen who had to turn out into the snow-storm. Serah eclared she would have no more to do with John for his carelessness, but it did not come such an issue as that." Riding, as it is now practised, may be a ice pastime for ladies; in the days of the pillion, when they mostly rode double, it was a very different kind of affair.

A LONGITUDINAL RIVER.

A river that runs East or parallel of latitude; consequently, as it flows towards the sea, it does not change its climate; and being in the same climate the crops that are grown at its mouth are grown also at its sources; and from one end to the other of it there is no variety of productions-it is all of wheat and corn, or wine or oil, or some other staple. Assorted cargoes, therefore, cannot be made up from the produce which such a river brings down to market. On the other hand, a river that runs North of South crosses parallels of latitude, changes its climate at every turn; and as the traveller descends it, he sees new agricultural staples abounding. Such a river bears down to the sea a variety of produc some of which some one or another of the nations is sure to want, and for which one will send to the market at its mouth, or the port whence they are distributed over the world. Its advantages are equally great for trade between the different section torough which it flows, as the staples of those sections are unitie, and productions lacking in one part of its course is supplied in another. The assortments of merchandise afforded by such a river are the life of commerce. They give it energy, activity and scope. Seen a river is the Mississippi, and the Mississippi is the only such river in the world.

EF Every real thought on every real subject knocks the wind out of som or other. As his breath somes back, he very properly expends it in hard words.

Much as we all must admire the good aste and eleganes which prompts laties to rear feathers of birds, flowers, and other rnaments in their hats and bonnets, still there is a limit to all things; and when ornaments dengerous to the person, either from their chemical or mechanical structure, are brought into vogue by Dar Pasition, who is the very last person in th world to reason scientifically upon any given question, it is high time that a warn-ing voice should be raised for the benefit of beer fair creatures who are about to infliet ersonal injury upon themselves without knowing anything about what they are about to do, till the injury is actually inflicted. Some months ago, for instance, I saw in a shop window, "Belladonna ointment for the ey m." Good gracious, I exclaimed, radesms a should be allowed, by his miser pol sessus ointment, to inflict tempo rary, ar at probably permanent injury upon the poor girl who should be tempted to use it. It addes only know the power of bellaif they would but once witness the the effect it has upon the delicate of the eye, tearing it gaping wide open, itting the full rays of the sun to the high or sensitive retins of the eye, thence ro agh the optic nerve to the brain, there by f firing to the lady who uses this oista fair chance of being struck down wit & amsurosis, or some other dreadful dise. Besides, ladies, please recollect that epon and dilated pupil, both in man and sman, is a sure sign of weakness of the mes would wish to exhibit to the world se fact, especially if it be not a fact, that he is of delicate constitution. A preparaion has lately been discovered for contract ing the pupil of the eye: but, thank goodsees, the shopkeepers as yet know nothing about it: and it shall not be my fault if they never discover it.

fashion springing up—a fashion not likely to inflict chemical but mechanical injury in the eye. Everybody knows what terrible pain caused by a minute piece of cinder of coal-sah getting into the eye during a railway journey. Again, there is a certain species of minute fly, whose mission of life during the summer months is to commit suicide in the eyes of ladies and gentlemen, and whose death-struggles, when its minute legs are caught, and entangled by the delicate membrane of the eyelida, are produclive of anything but a pleasant sensation to the unfortunate owner of the insect's tomb. When hard pressed in single combat the Chinese (clever fellows) have an ingenious habit of throwing a handful of powdered pepper into the eyes of their amailant, and this purpose have a pocket made in their dress, so that the papper should be always ready is case of necessity—not a bad plan, by the way, in case of burglars at home; but what would the ladies say if some kind person deliberately and maliciously cast a handful of powdered glass into their eyes; what pair and agony it would cause. But yet -though it hardly seems possible—this is exactly what certain ignorant persons are now attempting to do. A few days ago a lady returning from the Crystal Palace had a little chip box in her hand. I asked her what it was, "A new ornament for my hat," was the reply. "Allow me to look at it for a minute." "By the Goddess of Folly and Ignorance," exclaimed L "why here is spun glass." "Yes, great bunches of minute threads of glass to be used as ornament." I then examined these new ornaments more carefully; they are, in fact, the "peacocks' tails" which the glassblowers at the Polytechnic, Coloseeum, and other places have been so fond of making for many years past for the amusement of those who stand by to watch the process of glass-blowing. Tacy are made of various colored glass, and are certainly most beautiful in appearance, having a glossy, satinlike softness, and are, as well, highly irradescent in the sun. Up to this time, however, nobody has ever thought of utilizing this spun glass, and bad luck to this individual, whoever he may be, for his stupid ingenuity. The next day I walked down Regent street, and looked in the windows of the bonnet-shops. Ah! shi said I, glass peacocks' tails again, and placed too in hats in a flaming bunch. Just exactly over the eyes of the customer, when she comes, poor thing! Now for the necessary consequence. A lady buys one of these hats; the wind or a touch of the hand breaks up some five or six of these delicate spider web-like flaments of glass; they fall in all directions in little bits so minute that they can hardly be seen, even when placed on writing-paper on the table. They fall down and take up their position in the eyes; the lady rubs her eye ids, and closes them two or three times; now the bits of glass have a firm hold in their velvet-like liming. "I thick I have got a bit of dust in my eye," says the lady; 'just look, will you, please?" says she to her companion. "Nonsense," is the answer, bonnet-shops. Ah! sh! said I, glass pea-'just look, will you, please?" says she to her companion. "Nonsense," is the answer,

ORNAMENTS OF SPUN CLASS. | his open look a limit highest stock in The great least a limit highest stock in the great le be better in the morning, werer mind," she thinks to herself. In the middle of the night she wakes up in the greatest pain; her eyes seem on fire; she attempts to open them; the pain is weens; she closes them again, and the semetion is of hot water in the er What is she to do? Sue bathes with cold water; the pain is not alleviated. She probably does not know that under no circumstance whatever, where there are the less symptoms of inflammation (it is very wel in cases of weakness), that cold water should be applied to the eye, and where is h water to be obtained in the middle of the sight? The poor thing suffers the greates egony all the livelong night—agony bad in field, but worse because the cause is not ascertained. The welcome morning sun dawns through the window, and its first rays light up the accursol people's fall, with its besutiful, yet deadly lustre, and then possibly the cause of all this misery flashes across the poor sufferer's mind. Tear out this horrid spun glass from the hat-into the fire with it, smash it up with the poker and dance round the horrid thing as savage do when they make a holocaust of the murderers of their parents and children. Spread the news of this new and injurious fashion far and near among your friends, and tell them Frank Backland has caracetly requested you to do so.

> WREKLY REVIEW OF THE PHILADELPHIA MARKETS.

FLOUR AND MEAL—There is no change in Flour; some 7000 bbls found buyers, mostly in small lots, at $6.96 50 for common and good superfine; $7.97.56 for extract, $7.97.635, for Fannsylvania and Western extra family, $1.95 for fancy de; old etock family at $6.50 $ bol; and sigh greate fineties at from $5.00 to $10 $ bol; and sigh greate fineties at from $5.00 to $10 $ bol; and sigh greate fineties at from $5.00 to $10 $ bol; as in quality. Hys Flour—sales at $6.50 $ bol; as in quality. Hys Flour—sales at $6.50 $ bol; as the sales are reported at $5.85 $5.00 the 100 bs.

100 hs.

GRAIN comes in slowly; about 25,000 bus of Wheat sold at 460@165c for reds, the latter for prime Pennsylvania; 170c for amber, and 173 to 185c for white. Rys—sales of Pennsylvania at 140c. Cora—about 50,000 bus, mostly new yellow found buyers, at 112@14te, and 110c for white; old is scarce and worth 132@133c. Oats—Some 24 500 bus Pennsylvania sold at 86c weight. Of Bariey and Mait the sales have mostly been confined to the latter, part at 162 @165c.

PROVISIONS—The market for hold species.

PROVISIONS—The market for bold meats is PROVISIONS—The market for bold meets is more active, with further sales of 3000 bols Mees Pork at $18,500,319 for old, and $23 for new. 700 bbis Beef Hams also sold at $18,850,319 bol, and Mess do in lots $19 for Western and $140,850,19 bbl, and Mess do in lots $19 for Western and $140,850,19 bbl, and Mess do in lots $19 for Western and worth $000,80 $160 Bs. Bacon is scarce; old Shoulders are selling at 734c, and Sides at $16c. Of green Meets the sales are mostly confined to pickled Hams at $11\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\(\frac{1}{2}\)\

Oc F dosen.

COTTON—The market is firm but inactive, sies reach about 300 bales, is small lots, at 5@85c for evolusry to good middling and middling fair quality, cash.

BARK—Quercitron comes is slowly. About 80 ands nave-been taken for export, at $36@37 or ist No. 1. Tanners' Bark continues scarce address.

Ph. COAL—The market is almost at a standstill, and prices are usesttled and drooping.

O'FFEE—The stock is very light, and the market firm. A few small lots have been dispused of, mostly Rio, within the range of 32@

possed of, mostly Rio, within the range of accessor, cash and time.

FEATHERS are scarce, and good Western sell at 60@52c $ D.

FRUIT—Sales of Apples at $5@4 and Cranberries at $6@10 $ bbt. For Dried Fruit the estand is fair at $6@10 $ bbt. For Dried Fruit the estand is fair at $6@10 $ bbt. For Dried Fruit the earth of the property of the property for unpared Peaches. Pared Peaches are acaused high.

HAY is better, we quote at $25@26 $\(\frac{1}{2}\) ton.

HEMP—There is very little stock here, a

HtDES—The market is very quiet. Of laughter, sales are reported at 101/2@111/2co

W B.
HOPS move off as wanted at 26@30c W B.
HOPS move off as wanted at 26@30c W B.
HRON—The market continues active and on the advance. Sales of about 1000 tons A thracite are reported, part at $10@45 for Forge and Foundry, and part on terms kept priva e.—
Scotch Pag is scarce and high. For Manufactured Iron the market is better, and the makers of Bar Iron flave advanced their prices $10 W

PHILADELPHIA CATTLE MARKETS. "there is nothing there; I can't see anything at all; you must have a cold in your eye;"
and nothing more is thought of it. The lady is uncomfortable all the evening with "the cold is her eye." When about to retire the cold is her eye." When about to retire the cold is her eye." When about to retire the cold is her eye." When about to retire the cold is her eye." When about to retire the cold is her eye." When about to retire the cold is her eye." When about to retire the cold is her eye." When about to retire the cold is her eye. The cold is the eye and the cold is her eye. The cold is the eye and the eye and the cold is the eye and the cold is the eye and the eye and

CURE SCARLET FEVER, CURE SCARLET PEVER

Dr. Radway's Pills are the only purgative me-licious safe to admishing in Searlet Foren Dr. Radway's Files are the only purposers officious cafe to administer in Seariest Foren, Erystpelan, Small Fox and other cruptive and reducing fevers. These pilin cure the patient and are a safeguard against the subsequent appearance of Dropsical efficient, Opthalmin, Stramoous discharges from the care, cerus, aleers, and availan joints, fits, convulsions and a trail of other maladies that scaries fever patients ausfir after treatment of this discous.

A LAMENTABLE PACT. Not one physician in one hundred ever or the patient under treatment of Secrist For Small Poz, Erysipeles. Greated that the pail recover from the possible symptoms of the grand disease—but the disease is only smaller and subsequently breaks out in other forms Radway's Pills are used in this or ony of Radway's Pills are used in this or any other disease where a care depends upon purgation, and purity of the blood, a perfect cure will be secured. Radway's Pills purge thoroughly, cleanse and purify the blood, regulate the Liver, Kidneya, Spices and other glade to a healthy and harmonious action; cossiles no straining, piles or tenesmus, they make a perfect cure, no more physic is necessary, man is restored to health, and Nature, until her laws are violated, heeps him healthy. Price 35 cessis ner box. seps him healthy. Price 25 cents per box.

SWAYNE'S COMPOUND STRUP OF WILD CHERRY SWAYNE'S COMPOUND STRUP OF WILD CHERRY SWAYNE'S COMPOUND STRUP OF WILD CHERRY SWAYNE'S COMPOUND STRUP OF WILD CHERRY

"Sold by Druggists."

RADWAY & Co., 87 Maiden Lane, New York.

swaths's compound struct of wild chainst
The Great Remedy for
The Great Remedy for
Consumption, Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchide, Spitting Blood, atthmaty of Broating, Fals in the Bide and Bruset, Palpitation or Discease of the Heart, Influence, Crosp. Brokus Constitution, Bore Throat, Hervous Debility, and all Discease of the Throat,
Breastand Lungs.
For thirty years it has been a standard remedy, curing the most obstitusts cases after all other remedice and treatment had failed. Prepared only pt Dr. 8 "A YNE & SON, No. 230 North Sixth St., Philadelphia.

For Covers, Colbs, and Trinoat Dison burn, use "Brose's Breachiel Troches," having proved their efficacy by a test of many year. The Troches are highly recommended and pre-scribed by Physicians and Surgeons in the Army Mancastra, Eng., May St., 1859.

Having tested the medicine called Pain KilLaz, manufactured by Preny Davis & Sox, of Provisence, in the United States, I have much pleasure in speaking of its great efficacy and usefulness. Two years ago I was suddenly afficted with a painful internal disease, when a friend of mine, (who just returned from the States) seeing my anguish, gave me a small quantity of Pain Killer which he brought with him, and which I to-k internally, as he directd. The relief was immediate and so satisfied was I of its value as a medicine, that I immediately sent over to New York for half a cone of the large bottles, and I am thankful to say it has proved to my family and to others who have used it, of inestimable value, and relief to most all kinds of suffering and pain.

"London Hair Color Restorer and Dressing."
"London Hair Color Restorer and Dressing."
"London Hair Color Restorer and Dressing."
"London Hair Color Restorer and Dressing." The only attested article that will absolutely restore the hair to its original color and beauty, causing it to grow where it has failen off or become thin. Wholesale and retail, at Doctor Swatwa's, 336 North Sixth street, Philada. Price 50 cents; 6 bottles $2,50. nov7-3m

FURS.

THE LANGUET AND BROT STOCK IN THE CITY,

CHAS. OAKFORD & SONS, CONTINENTAL HOTEL, PHILADELPHIA.

MARRIAGES.

Marriage notices must always be accommod by a responsible name.

On the 6th instant, by Frienda' ceremony, at the residence of the bride, in presence of over-evers appointed by the meeting, WILLIAM M. CAWLEY, to ELIZABETH H. HINCHMAN, all of Woodstewn, Salem accounts.

LEAD continues in request and firm, and 500 pigs Spanish sold at $10% the 100 flbs, cash.

LEATHER—The stocks and receipts are very light, and the market is steady.

LUMBER—The active season is over, and prices well maintained and firm.

MOLASES—The market is firmer; sales are confined to 1200 bbis New Oricans, mostly by auction, at $45@673%c, cash.

PLASTER—We quote so't at $4,75 p ton.

RICE—The market is quiet at 7½@73%c p for Rangoon.

SEEDS—There is very little offering, and Eloverseed is in good demand, with further ales of 1500 bus at $7,50@8,25 p bus for combon to good and choice lots, the former forold fop. Timothy is quiet, and nominally held at 3, and Flaxseed firm and in request at $2,15 p us.

SPIRITS—No change in Brandy and Gin; the ransactions are limited and prices firm. NE um is held at 105c. Whiskey is firmer, with see sales of bbls at 98@95c for second-hand on new Penna and Western, and the latter arce; Drudge selis at 90c.

DEATHS.

Notices of Deaths must always be accompanied by a responsible name.

On the 5th instant, CLARA T. COOPER, daughter of Wm. M. and Maria Cooper, in her 17th year.
On the 2d instant, Margaret, relict of the late John Eckel.
On the 5th instant, Charles Wence, aged 63

On the 4th instant, Mrs. Estima Anderson, in her 56th year.
On the 8d instant, William M., son of Wm. H. and Elizar ch Lebma: aged 28 years.
On the 3d instant, Emilt, wife of John Palmer, aged 34 years.
On the 3d instant, Henry Coventy, in his 29th year.
On the 3d instant, Mrs. Martha Lawasure, on the 3d instant, Mrs. Martha Lawasure, wife of Daniel

Wholesale Green the BIDDALL, Country among wife of Daniel

Wholesale Green that BIDDALL, responsible citizens.

THE SATURDAY EVENING POST

weekly at the Persebeel D R. DEXTER, 119 Names St., N. Y.
SINGLAIR TOUSEY, No. 101 Names St., N
ERRICY TAYLOR, Sen Iven Budding, Baltin
A. WILLIAMS & CO., 100 Wanthington St., IERNRY MINER, Not. Y1 & Y0 Prits St., Pic
SOEN P. HUNT, Macroice Ball, Pittsburg,
OGO, N. LEWIS, 50 West State B. Constend.
A. GUNTER, 10a, 60 Third St., Economic, Ey
SOEN E. WALSE, Chicago, III.
BORALLY & CO., Chicago, III.
BORALLY & CO., Chicago, III.
BORALLY & CO., Chicago, B. Levas, Missour

Periodical dealers generally throughout the Tax

The Regish Ambassador, some years since, prevailed so far with the Turkish Resperor, as to perseade him to hear some of our Regish music, from which (as from other liberal sciences) both be and his nation were Reglish music, from liberal sciences) both be and his nation was asturally averse. But it happened that the musicians were so long in tuning their inmusicians were so long reat Turk, distanting these ten their tediousness, went away in disconten before their music began. I am afraid that the differences and disamsions betwire Chris-tian churches (being so long in reconciling their discords) will breed in pagens such a disrelish of our religion, as they will not be invited to attend thereunto.

People often wonder at the mo stural things in the world. "I say, Digby," said Quilp to an acquaintance, "you look soher this morning." "And for a very obvious reason," said Digby; "I AN

to Flowans IN DECEMBER .- The New Orieans papers of the 6th instant say that the city gardens are filled with flowers in full bloom, and that the markets are plied with fresh tomatoes and other sun

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL TIMES. A WEEKLY RELIGIOUS PAPER.

One Bollar a Year in Advance. THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL TIMES discuss all questions of PRACTICAL INTEREST to Super-intendents and Teachers, and is supplied every week with fresh ORIGINAL ARTICLES from able REGULAR CONTRIBUTORS.

Every year adds to the evidence that such a paper as this was needed. Whenever it linds its way into a new neighborhood, the teachers hall it with pleasure, as supplying a want they had long feit.

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL TIMES is an unme in every CHRISTIAN HOME.

Its conductors strive to furnish not only the BEST BABBA TR-SCHOOL JOURNAL that is published, but also spare no effort to make it equally acceptable as a FAMILY PAPER. In every number there is to be found much inte-resting and valuable reading for PARENTS and their Children.

THE PREMIUM PLATE.

We desire to introduce this paper to carnest, active Superintendents, Teachers, and friends of the cause throughout the country. We therefore offer, among other premiums, a copy of a large and expensive Scripture Print, representing "Curist Blassing Little Children "the see who will send in lists of NEW subscriber for 1864.

The names of five new subscribers, with Five Dollars, secures The Premium Plate to the getter up of the club. In ordering the Picture by mail, 12 cents in stamps should be sent to pay the pressure.

he postage.

Bubscriptions may be forwarded at any me suring the year, and the papers will be ent to as many different post offices as desired. Becimen copies of the paper sent free, on receipt of a stamp to pay the postage.

> J. C. GARRIGUES & CO., Publishers and Booksellers,

148 SOUTH FOURTH ST., PHILADELPHIA

FICKARDT'S CATTLE POWDER.

The Merciful Man is Kind to his Beast

This Powder stands pre-eminent and first in rank of all those Cattle Powders which have come under the notice of all the most able and experienced Farmers and Agriculturists in this country for many years; in fact, we say, without the slightest fear of contradiction, that for the diseases in which it is used, it stands far supe-rior to any other preparation; nor is its benefidiseases in which it is used, it stands far superior to any other preparation; nor is its beneficial effect confined only to the Armai. In a diseased and unhealthy condition, but on the contrary, in the perfect healthy animal, given, in proper doses, mixed with its Fran, will improve its Digestion, and by this means the whole Physical condition of the animal is strengthened tenfold, improving the quality and quantity of Milk from your Cows, keeping all the secretion of your Horars, Cattle and Hoos in a proper and natural condition, thereby enabling their systems to throw off any tendency to disease keeping their skin and costs in a perfect healthy state, and through this means your stock is increased in value and good condition, which, to the prudent and economical Farmer, is more than wealth. This Powder has been in use for many years, and none is genuine except that which bears the name of Fickardi's Cattle Powder.

Prepared only by

er. Prepared only by WILLIAM RALBTON,
Late of the firm of LAWS & KALSTON,
Wholesale Druggiats, Philadelphia.

Wholesale Druggists, Philadelphia.

Washington, Oct. 16th, 1862.

Win. Ralpson,—Deer Hr:—Having tried the Cattle Powder, manufactured by you, I consider it a good article for the diseases of Horses, and as good a preparation as there is in the market.

HIRAM WRIGHT,

Assistant Vetenary Surgeon for the United States florenment.

For sale by all Druggists and dralers, Price 25 cents per package.

Agents—D. S. BARNES & Co.,

—902 Broadway, New York.

DYOTT & Co.,

jan16-5m 232 N. 24 88., Philadelphia.

Wholesale Oreggists and Chemista, it No. 119 Market St., Philadelphia.

Thirty work a line for such inverti pay Payment is required in advisors.

ECLECTIC MEDICAL COLLEGE

Have purchased the old school Feansylvania Cotings, together with the Museum and ap-paratus for teaching.

Spring Session commences the first Monday in Feb. Address W. PAINE, M. D., 981 Arch Street for Catalogue or information as to Cotings.

B. FRANK PALMER.

SUMMBON-ARTIST TO THE MEDICAL COL-LEGIS AND HOSTITALE; AUTISON OF NEW RULES FOR AMPUTATIONS; LAVERTON OF THE "PALMER ASSA," Loss, do., has removed to

THE STONE EDIFICE No. 1600 Chaptaut St., Philada.—1600. Tunne Squares West or the OLD Starp.

This Benklinknesse, erocted at great expense, for the business, combines every possible combines of the business, combines every possible combined and the first and facility for Surgine-Aristic operations.

The Proprietor will divecte his possible of the Proprietor will divecte his possible of struct the "PALMER LIMBS" (under the New Patents), in measurable profession. Thousand of these Lende are wern (though few are suspected), and a gainty of gold and other media (the Printe Printe" won, over all competition, in the printipal cities of the world), states the public value of these inventions. All gaussing PALMER LIMBS" has the name of the incombine cities of the world.

The attention of Surgeons, Physicians, and persons interested, is most respectfully soli-All former partnerships have expired by limi-B. FRANK PALMER, Surgeon-Artist, pel8-ly 1609 Chestaut St., Philade

WITHERS & PETERSON 29 SOUTH THIRD ST., PHILADA.

STOCK AND EXCHANGE BROKERS

STOCKS EONDS, &c., Bought and Sold at Board of Brokers and privately. 7 8-10 TREASURY NOTES constantly hand, and will be sold at lowest rates.

All orders for GOVERNMENT SECURITIES UNCURRENT MONEY Bought and Sold. Collection of NOTES, DRAFTS, &c., made in all the Loyal States and Canada. DRAFTS furnished on all accessible points.

NEW BOOK OF MUSICAL GEMS. OPERATIC PEARLS.

Selection of Songs, Duets and Trice compri-

Vocal Beauties of the Best Operus, With English, French and Italian Words, and Pianoforte Accompaniments. This book is uni-form in style with the popular Series, "The Home Circle," "Shower of Fearls," and "Silver Home Circie," 'Shower of Fearis," and "Silver Chord." It contains a superior collection of Busic in a neat, compact and durable form, at a very low price,—one twentieth of that which the rame would cost in sheets. Price, in Plain Binding, $2; Cloth, $2.25; Cloth, full gilt, $3. Mailed, post-paid, on recipit of price,

OLIVER DITSON & CO.,
jan9-4f

Publishers, Boston.

WENDERORTH & TAYLOR. PHOTOGRAPHERS AND IVORYTYPISTS, 912, 914 and 916 Chestnut Streets.

PHILADELPHIA,

Invite attention to their improved styles of Im-perial and extra Imperial Photographs, present-ing the fluish of retouched pictures at the cost of plain.

Every style of picture furnished from the Carle de Visile to the highly finished iverytpe and Oil Portrait, with satisfaction guaranteed.

Particular attention gives to copying Old Pictures.

DO YOU WANT LUXURIANT WHIS-KERS ON MUSTACHESS—My ON-GUENT will force them to grow heavily in six weeks fupon the smoothest face, without stain or injury to the skin. Price II—sent by mall, post free, to any address, on receipt of an order. M. G. GRAHAM. jant6-St. 169 Nassau Bt., New York City.

CALCINED MAGNESIA

Is free from unpleasant tasts, and three times the strength of the common Calcined Magnesia.

A WORLD'S FARE MEDAL and FOUR
FIRST PREMIUM SILVER MEDALS have been awarded it, as being the best in the market. For sale by the Druggists and courty storekeepers, and by the manufacturer, THOMAS J. HUSBAND,
nov28-2m. Philadelinis.

DEAFNESS, EYE AND EAR, THROAT DISEASES, CATARRH—
The above maladies treated with the

DR VON MOSCHZISKER, Oculi-t and Aurist, graduate of Vienna, Office, 1027 Wainut Steet, Philadelphia,

Inventor of the celebrated GOSTANIES

DIRECTIONS FOR WALM

DURNO'S

A SPECIFIG POB

CATARRH

AWD DISEASES OF THE HEAD & THEOAT.

issure the desired effect. These, when p

PASS IN THE PROPERTY OF THE PASS OF THE PASS OF THE PASS IN THE HEAD, OF MENUOUS HEADAS IS UNUALLY THE PASS OF T

sion, until spessing is produced.

For Dearwass, Weak or Sone Eyes, use Souff, morning, noon and night, as long as be necessary.

be necessary.

In all Acurs and Chrowic Camannal Approximate, and for Browchitis, it ought to be taken at least two or three times daily, and oftener, as convenience will adout, acuffed up thoroughly, so as to be felt in the throat, where its taste in pleaseast, (as if confaring me scheme,) promoting free expectoration and the necessary discharge from the head.

For LEVANTS OF TOURG CHILDREN having BRUFFLES OR STOPPACE AT THE No

Sold by all Aret class Druggists in th United States and British Provinces. Sold wholesale by Demas S. Barnes & Cv., 200 Broadway. When not to be had of Driggists, a out send by mail, pool-paid, for 30 cents, or four or One Dollar, by the Proprietor,

J. DURNO, 214 Greenwich St., N. York.

Truths that Defy Contradiction.

Read the following facts in relation to CRISTA.DORO'S EXCELSIOR HAIR DYE.

nd then say if it has any equal in the world :-It neither burns the skin nor bair. It colors every bair sike. Its blacks and browns are Nature's dupileates.

It is applied in a few minutes.
It leaves a gloss upon the hair,
It is more permanent than other dyes.
It contains no corrosive lagredient.

And lastly, its inventor challenges a trial be-tween this dye and any other in existence, whe-ther of native or foreign origin.

Manufactured by J. CRISTADORO, No. 6 Astor House, New York. Sold everywhere, and applied by all Half

Price, $1, $1,50 and $3 per box, according to size

Cristadoro's Mair Preservative

Is invaluable with his Dye, as it imparts the ui-most softness, the most beautiful gloss, and great vitality to the Hair. Price, 50 cents, $1 and $2 per bottle, according

To Restore the Sick to Health.

The blood must be purified, and all medicines are useless which do not possess the quality of stimulating the blood to discharge its impuri-ties into the bowels,

BRANDRETH'S PILLS

Did Pictures.

For Fine assortment of ALBUMS constantly on band.

N. B. Views of COUNTRY SEATS, HORSES, dec., taken on moderate terms.

DOYOU WAST LUXURIANT WIIIS.

The Hon. Jacob Beyers, of Springville, Indiana, writes to Dr. Brandreth under date of GUENT will force them to grow beavily in aix GUENT will force them to grow heavily in six weeks (upon the smoothest face) without stain or injury to the skin. Price it—sent by mall, post free, to any address, on receipt of an order.

B. G. GRAHAM.

jan16-3t 199 Nassau St., New York City.

WHINKERS PRODUCED IN THREE WEEKS by the use of my prescription, which I send by mait for 25 c's Address WM. Pitter, Box 1943, Philada., Pa.

HUSBAND'S

CALCINED MAGNESIA

May 11, 1861:

"I have used your Invaluable Vegetable Universal Pills in my family since 1858; they have always cuted, even when other medicines were of no avail. I have been the means of my neighbor as wait. I have been the means of my neighbor as with the result through their use. They are used in this region for fillious and Liver Disease., Ever and sque, and in all rheumstle cases with the mean perfect success. In fact, they are the great reliance in sickness, and I trust your venerable line may be long spared to propagate so excellent a medicine for the use of man.

Please send me your lowest price by the gross."

Please send me your lowest price by the gross."

Price 25 and 50 cents. Sold by all Druggints Office, 56 Cortlandt Street, New York.

BRANDRETH'S PILLS are sold at the PRIN-CIPAL OFFICE 294 CANAL Sf., and 4 UNION SQUARE, New York. ASK FOR NEW STYLE.

Obtain your first supply from one of these depots or from one of the regular advertised agents for the GENUINE BRANDRETH'S PILLS; you will then know how to discera between the true and the false.

Price 25 cents each. Sold by MRS. SHAEF-FER, No. 14 North Eighth street, Philadelphia; by T. W. DYOFT & SONS, No. 232 North Second street, Philadelphia, and by all respectable dealers in medicines.

office, 1027 Wainut Steet, Philadelphia, where can be examined hundreds of testimonized from the very best known men in the country, among which are several from old and responsible citizens of Philadelphia, who can be personally referred to.

I EADACH*, TOOTHACHE AND NEURALGIA cared at once by Wolcout's Pails Annistication, Catarra and Wesk Nerves in a few weeks. For sale at all Drug Stores, Whole alle Deput, GRURGE SIMEON, 1313. Chestnut St., Philadelphia Agents wanted and well paid.

the pillies, and to whom we do will be for the fact of the fact of the fact of the fact of which blood it was with blood it was to be for the fact of openi, as senty is openi, as senty is own week. d the Children reason for his to had been de to chose a my ten place, spike large, but the fine it got youry che a was in a long was in a lensy many of the mome from a great key would be m. Travelling the net cross coming the travelling travelling the travelling travelling the travelling t

the Pillion

who has bee

had a special is we were then ok besn't come?

m't know wha and know me had lost her. at of the stable mounted, away ok for the mis-seed to do sup-firenide on the SHOW WAS THE soon got dat, rain. We was fter hour west n. It was ten three came to d got to us by ne back home ot see, and the er over. John e way he had Sarah ! at the fronzy. Lano more horse on foot in the nd by the

as very slow w had almos they tracked hares under ottage a mfe en born some genor, and inand passed s our fears for ntlemen who storm. Sarah

re to do with

did not come

d, may be s e days of the double, it was IVER. of crosses no ently, as it not change ame climate, a mouth are d from one here is no all of wheat some other fore, cannot

et. On the s North of de, changes the travelagricultural river bears productions, ther of the which one mouth, or buted over qually great nt sections which such

river are it energy, ver is the s the only staples of

o course is riments of

somebody back, he

low to Cure a Smoky Chimney.

For hard lying, the following can't be est. A correspondent, who lives in New Immpshire, states that in those parts resides man called Joe, a fellow noted for the Hee he can tell, and as a sample, re-

Jee called at Holion's one day, and found alm almost choked with smoke, when he

"You don't know as much about m og smoky chimneys as I do, squire,

"Ah," said Holton, with interest, "did in over see a smoky chimney cured ?" "Seen a smoky chimney cured ?" said old Joa. "I think I have! I had the worst one in Seaboard county once, and I cured it a le teo much." " How was that !" asked Holton.

"Why you see," said Jos, "you see, I slit a little house out youder at Wolf Hollow, see or twelve years ago. Jim Bush, the fellow that built the chimneys, kept blind drunk three-quarters of the time, and crazy drunk the other. I told him that he would have something wrong, but he stuck to it and finished the house. Well, we moved in, and built a fire next morning to boil the teasattle. All the smoke came through the sem and went out of the windows; not a went up the flues. We tried it for two or three days, and it got worse and worse gun to come down the chimney. It put down by the pailful. We had to get the baby off the floor as soon as we could, or it would have been drowned. In fifteen minutes the water stood knee-deep on the Then I went out and took a look. It didn't rain half so hard outside, and I pretty on see what was the matter. The drunker case had put the chimney wrong end up, and it drawed downwards; it gather the rain within a hundred yards, and poured in down by bucketaful."

"Well, that was unfortunate," remarked Holton. "But what in the world did you do with the house? Surely, you never cu

"Didn't I, though ?" answered old Joe. "Yes, I did."

"How !" asked Holton.

"Turned it the other end up," said the incorrigible, "and then you ought to have seen it draw. That was the way I cured it

"Drew too much?" asked Holton

"Well, squire, you may judge for your self," said old Joe. "Pretty soon after we ot the chimney down and the other end un. missed one of the chairs out of the room and directly I see another of 'em shooting towards the fire-place. Next the table went and I seen the back log going up., Then the baby under t'other, and started; but just as I got to the door, I seen the cat going the floor backwards, holding on with her claws to the carpet, yelling awfully. It wasn't no use. I just seen her going over the top of the chimney, and that was the

"Well, what did you do then?" asked "Of course you couldn't live in

"Couldn't I, though ?" said Joe; "but did. I put a poultice on the jam of the fire-place, and that drawed t'other way; so we had no more trouble."

THE RIVAL CANDIDATES.-A Western condent sends the following, which is very good-none the worse that it has apneared before in substance in the magazines simippi. Very likely it happened in several places. Politicians over 1 ans are much alike:

A candidate for office came upon " a poor white man" who had a vote to give, if h did have to do his own milking. The cand! date, Jones, saked him if he should hold the now, which seemed to be uneasy, and the old man concenting very readily, he took her by the horns, and held fast until the tion was done.

"Have you had Robinson (his rival) around

"Oh, yes. He's behind the barn, holding the calf."

BIG AND LITTLE.—One day a farmer, dri ving along in his wagon, stopped and took in a poor little boy. The boy seemed much pleased. But soon he seemed filled with wonder. He would look for a while at the little front wheel, and then at the big hind wheel. The farmer couldn't think why he hapt looking and laughing, till, at length, g his horse quite fast, the boy, forgetself, barst out in a fit of laughter, ting himself, burst out in a fit of laughter, and spoke to the little front wheel, "Go it, little wheel, big wheel can't catch you."

VALUABLE SALVE-A Mormon prices mored Micholas made a nerve and home all-ming salve, and thought he would experiwith it. He first cut off his if and applied some of the salve to think him best. This educates nobody—the public are none the wiser—and it is because you I've thought a heap about the matter.

To did not know which dog was for their awards that we do not have better yields, at least Elcholas said so.

This educates nobody—the again."

So it goes, John—so it goes, and I tell you I've thought a heap about the matter.

And I'll tell you what I think some other judges and more just decisions. For nine justice of the peace has not been in the Drawer, but Squire Burt, of Wells, must have a place. Mr. Thompson brought a suit against his neighbor Harrison. They were both friends of the justice, and the case was heard before a jury, and both parties told their story, when the squire said, Now of you find that Mr. Thompson telled more truth than Harrison, then you find for the plaintiff; and of Harrison truth than Thompson, then you find for the greatly applanded by the spectators.—Har-per's Monthly.

THE MOON AND THE WEATHER.

A study of the thermometric observation at Greenwich, shows that there is a tolerably constant increase of temperature from the new moon to the full, and a decrease from the full moon to the first quarter. It is also found that the maximum of rainy or cloudy days corresponds with the first half of the lunar period, and the maximum of fine, clear days, with the last half. This fact is explained by the dispersing action of the full moon upon the clouds; and this disaction is in turn accounted for thus: The heat rays of the moon are almost inappreciable even to the most delicate instru-ments. Melloni found that the index of an extremely sensitive thermoelectric vile scarcely moved when a moonbeam was concentrated on it by a lens so powerful that a sunbeam thus converged would have burned platinum into vapor. The her rays sent from the moon, therefore, must I intercepted and absorbed by our atmos Being thus concentrated in upper strata of the atmosphere, the heat necessarily warms that region, and thur dissipates the clouds and hinders their for mation. The full moon will, therefore clear the aky, and by so doing, will lower the temperature of the earth, for clouds ac as a blanket to the earth, keeping its hear from radiating into space. The new moon deprived for some time of the sun's heat, incapable of exercising a similar influence and the rainy or cloudy days are therefor more frequent during the first half of the

THE LOCUST.

Many writers mention the curious reser lance which the head of the locust bears to that of the horse; whence the ancient Greeks call it " the horse of the earth," the modern Italians, "the little horse," and the Arabs, "the soldier's horse." This last comparison seems to include something more than the mere shape of the head; and when we read Salt's description of the Abyssinian locust The head and shoulders-armed with thick shell or case, that of the head of leaden grey color-the body cased with seven strong plates on the back, folding over one another:" and when we remember that one genus takes its name from the spine or spike which projects from the middle of the breast; we seem to have no faint or imaginary picture of the ancient war-horse armed with projecting spikes and thick plates of solid metal. "The appearance of them (says Joel) is as the appearance of horses; and as horsemen, so shall they run-and when they fall upon the sword they shall not be wounded," (ii. 4, 8) Compare with this the language of the Apocalypse And the shapes of the locusts were lik unto horses prepared unto battle-and they had breastplates as it were breastplates for In vain we chisel, as best we can the mysterious block of which our life i made, the black vein of destiny continually minate invective are equally good-both good for nothing.

Agricultural.

FARMER GARRULOUS TALKS Again Concerning Agricultural Pairs, etc.

Old you ask if I had been to the Fair John ? Yes, I was there. What did I think of it? Why, I thought a good deal about it. I am satisfied that the days when Fairs are useful are passing away. I am sorry to be compelled to say so. There is something radically wrong about the motives of mer who visit Fairs. They do not seem to labor during the year for the purpose of making creditable display at the Fair. Our best farmers show the least. Now these exhibi tions of fine stock, of grain, vegetables and fruit, should mean something. Each object should be a lesson to talk about—an object lesson. An animal enters the ring, is looked over by the judges, a ribbon is tied to the horn, he is led around the ring once, and passes away into the stall. Well, what comes of it? Do the judges make any re port beyond the simple award? Not at all. They award a premium to what they call the best bull, without pointing out why they think him best. This educates nobody—the

A FACT.

CONDUCTOR (Taking half-price ticket).- "Surely, Miss, that young lady is over ter re you not, Miss ?"

DIGNIFIED YOUNG MISS.—"Pray, are you not aware, conductor, that it is extremely [Conductor retires overwhelmed. rude to ask a lady her age."

tive merits of animals, would be exceedingly puzzled if called upon to report seles the points of merit are upon which their awards are made. The fact is, there are few men who act as judges who have any standar of excellence fixed in their minds at all. The judge is governed almost exclusively by the impression the animal makes upon s mind as he superficially glances at his Now there is Dolorous. What does he snow about the points of excellence make up a good milch cow? It is doubtful if he ever milked a cow in his life. I don' believe he knows that there are any pecu liarities about a cow which indicate superio excellence as a milker. And yet I saw him treading around a great overgrown, white parren Short-Horn cow, that had no more bag than an ox, and was just about as much of a milker, pointing out, with a great show of wisdom, the remarkable character of this animal, to a brother committee-man, who evidently knew less of the animal than he did, and behold, the big, barren, long-haired, staggy Short horn were away the blue ribbon, while a tidy little dame of a cow, with a bag as big as a half bushel basket, and the milk dripping from her tests - milch cow all over-went off the grounds as demurely and modestly as she entered? And these savans had scarcely looked at the "scrawner "That is what is the matter." The is what is killing our Fairs. The spirit of competition-honorable competition and emula tion-is not fostered. Fools in kid gloves astonish and discourage practical men by their displays of wisdom. It is grinding to one's sensibitities, John, to see how thes things go. And it makes me sad to see that this course of things is bearing legitimate fruit. It is destroying our exhibitions.

I met Bidin on the Fair grounds to-day He was looking down in the mouth asked him what was the matter. He said he had been in trouble. He was disgusted He had a fine-wooled flock in competition with others. He was proud of his sheep and liked to have them examined. "But he said the committee pulled a little wool out of the the animals as if they were trying to see through the wool over their eyes, and passed on to another pen, where they made the same kind of an examination and then rendered the verdict. Bidin said, that had the award been made to his flock, he should not have regarded it as a compliment; for it was not the result of a careful, critical examination. Not a committee-man got into the pen with the sheep-not an animal was handled by a member of the committee and Bidin said he would be d-ogged if he would take another sheep to a County

And there was my friend Geneus, who rushed up to me with a bright light in his eye, colored with indignation, saying, " Pil tell you what, Farmer Garrulous, I am not going to attend any more of your Fairs and be imposed upon in this way. There is my cultivator. What do you think? They sent a lawyer, a doctor, and a horse-jockey around to examine it and award a premium. Not one of the committee knew anything about farming or farm implements. They told me so. I told them I would not show mine then-I would withdraw it from com petition; and I did. And now I am going some. And when I want an award I will invite a dozen or score of farmers into the field and show them what it can do, I'm not going to pay entrance fees for the purpose of enacting such a farce as this again."

out of ten judges who decide upon the rela- Hew Vegetation Influences Climate

The climate controls vegetation in a gree degree, is quite evident, and it is equally true that vegetation itself has a marked effect upon the climate. In the first place, exerts an influence upon the wind. Where the land is bare of trees, the wind has an unobstructed sweep; and where this pre vails, and is violent, the climate is not only unpleasant to man and beast, but is unfavor how this is upon their broad unshelter prairies, and New Englanders know how along their bleak sea coasts. The only way to grow handsome and healthy trees h such localities, is first to surround one's farm or garden with a belt of strong, coarse trees like the willow, silver poplar, and ever greens. Outside of such yerdant barriers the trees and shrubs, if planted, grow lop sided, lean, and stunted; inside, they stand erect, well developed, and vigorous. out this protection there is the unpleasant ness of having a gale forever blowing abou one's ears, the ceaseless roar of the wind around the dwelling, the rattle of windows and doors, the increased consumption of fuel, and the discomfort of cattle at all seasons, but especially in Winter; put the and the like things together, and we find that whatever serves to break the violence of the wind, or to change its direction, is thing of considerable importance. It should not be forgotten that air in motion produce more chilliness than the same air at rest Wet your finger and hold it up in the stil air, and you will hardly feel the cold; but swing it around, and the hand will be rapidly chilled. The difference between the climate of a windy region and one shell tered from driving currents of air, is equally

Again, vegetation affects climate by limit ing evaporation of moisture. Many year ago, Humboldt declared that men in all climates, by stripping the hills of trees, were preparing for themselves two cals riz: the want of fuel and the want of wate The evaporation from trees produces a coo and moist local atmosphere. The overhang ing boughs prevent the too rapid evaporation of moisture from the dissipation by the wind. The sources of nearly all brooks and creeks are to be found in springs among the hills; and by cutting off the trees which have always over shadowed them, the moisture is rapidly evaporated, and the springs lowered, if not dried up.

Experience is continually demonstrating thia. Every old farmer will tell us that his springs are less copious now than they were thirty years ago; and so of the variou streams, large and small. The rains fall, perhaps, in nearly their former abundance, but they come oftener in torrents, which run down the hill-sides, unobstructed by trees, brushwood, and low vegetation, and pour themselves into the streams of the valley, producing freshets and hurtful inundations and so we go from freshets to droughts, from heavy rains to long periods of arid, parch ing dryness. In some parts of Europe, so great harm has followed the destruction forests, that legislation has been called in to stay their demolition and to promote the planting of new .- Am. Agriculturist

Johnny remarked to his grand mother that old Mrs. Cranshaw had the ap pearance of a person with one foot in th grave. "Well, really, upon my word," said the antique lady, " I thought I noticed she walked a leetle lame lately."

A poet that falls in writing, be often a morose critic. The weak and insipid white wine makes at length excellent

LOOK UPWARD.-In thy agony of a troo bled conscience, always look upwards unto a gracious God to keep thy soul steady; for ng downward on thyself, thou at and nothing but what will increase thy fear infinite sins, good deeds few and imperfect it is not thy faith, but God's faithfulnes thou must rely upon; casting thine eyes downwards on thyself to behold the great distance betwirt what then deservest an what thou desirest, is enough to make thee giddy, stagger, and reel into despair: ever therefore lift up thine eyes unto the hills, from whence cometh thy help, never view ing the deep dale of thy own unworthiness but to abate thy pride when tempted to pre-

Useful Receipts.

To MAKE CANDLES.—Take of alum 5 lbs. dissolve entirely in 10 gallons of water, bring the solution to the boiling point, and add 20 lbs. tallow, boiling the whole for an hour, skimming constantly. Upon cooling s little, strain through thick muslin or flannel; set aside for a day or two for the tallow to harden; take it from the vessel, lay saide for an hour or so for the water to drip from it, then heat in a clean vessel suffici mould; when moulded, if you desire bleach them, lay upon a plank by a windo turning every two or three days. Candles made strictly by the above recipe will burn with a brilliancy equal to the best adaman tine, and fully as long.

FOR POLISHING BLACK STOVES .- Mix the black lead with equal quantities of milk and surpentine. It will require to be well brushe Atterwards.

owing receipts from an English paper:
A very nice little Christmas pudding small party, suitable to a young and happy pair who are just commencing housekeeping, are rather inexperienced, and can only invite three or four friends:-1 oz. of candle emon peel, 1 oz. of orange peel, 6 oz. of raisins, 6 oz. of currants, 6 oz. of best beet suct, 6 oz. of flour, 6 oz. of sugar, two eggs a pint of milk, a small nutmeg, and a tea spoonful of sait. Stone the raising, pick wash, and dry the currents, chop the snet extremely fine, put them, with the lemo and orange peel finely sliced, all together in your large dish for mixing, add the flour and sugar, and grate the nutmeg over all. Then beat up your eggs, and stir the milk gently into them. With this liquid wet all the other ingredients; flour well a strong pudding-cloth, and when you have thorou mixed your pudding materials, so that all is make them too wet or to leave them too dry, put your pudding into the cloth, tie it tightly, and boil in a large pot four or five hours, taking care that the water boils ere the pud ding is put in, and that it is kept on a quick boil during the whole time of cooking, and also that the pot is replanished with boiling water, as it frequently requires to be. A CHRISTMAS PUDDENG FOR A LARGE

PARTY.-When small fingers can aid in the required preparation, and assist in the demo lition of a good plain family pudding, 1 lb. of raisins, 1 lb. of currants, 1 lb. of suet, and 34 lbs. of flour, with 1 lb. of sugar, 3 eggs, and a tablespoonful of ground alispice, 1 oa. of candied lemon, 1 oz of orange peal. Prepare these ingredients as usual, and boil this pudding at least seven hours. Always place an old plate at the bottom of the se in which a pudding is to be boiled, and do not imagine that a plum pudding can be over-boiled: I never knew any instance of this, but I have known many a pudding perfectly dry in the centre for want of a suf-ficient quantity of water or too small a saucepan in which to boil it; and I have known a rich plum table in the form of a very thick soup for lack of being firmly and tightly tied when put into the pudding-cloth for boiling. Never omit to dip your pudding into a pail of clear cold water for about three minutes when taking it up for being dished this renders it firm and prevents the cloth adhering to it. Some persons put brandy into the pudding when making it, but I prefer-especially for Christmas-to have a little brandy poured over the pudding after it is dished; then set on fire, and so very carefully brought into the diningroom. Children delight in this sight. Some prefer having a little drop from a table spoon poured over each slice of pudding and set on fire ere it is handed round; and some kind uncle is generally the person to get the tablespoon heated, and superintene this little exciting arrangement. I beg to inform young housekeepers that very great deal of trouble may be saved by doing things in time. I have my suet at present ready, finely chopped, sprinkled with salt, and so pressed down in a basin that it will keep for months. The raising currents, &c , may be all ready a day or two, nay a week, beforehand. The pudding may, if desirable, be made and boiled at may, if desirable, be made and boiled at leisure, and hung jup, if tied up in the pudding-cloth, for a day or two. When wanted, put it into a pot full of boiling water for about an hour or two, depending on the size of the pudding; them dipped into the pall of cold water for dishing, as before described. Some almoses abould be blanched, simply by pouring scalding water over them in a basin, when the skins are easily peeled away; these almonds should be stuck into the pudding ere it goes to table.

The Riddler.

MISCELLANEOUS ENIGHA. WRITTEN POR THE SATURDAY SVENISS TO I am composed of 100 letters.

My 88, 4, 99, 99, 46, 75, 8, 65, 66, 84, 14, 16 frequently called upon in the de

My 45, 46, 77, 36, 100, 50, 35, is fee My 96, 21, 80, 76, 8, is a kind of serpent

My 26, 81, 67, 54, 21, 91, 6, 35, 40, is what are 20, 57, 18, 71, 9, was a warlike per gigantic size, who dwelt on the borders of Canasa. My 41, 50, 61,125, 48, 90, 87, 75, was a pr nent General in the Northern army. My 1, 13, 64, 86, 48, is a very comm in Scripture, which alguides le 27, 98, 83, 92, 46, 55, 24, 76; 41, 66,

My 88, 84, 41, 82, 12, is an awkward, Ill-dree

68, 90, 70, 81, 7, 71, 81, 66, 87, 99, 1 instrument which measures light. 97, 64, 17, 79, is a rapacious bird of the pelican tribe.

15, 86, 65, is the name of a tree maker which an angel conversed with Gideo.
47, 56, 89, 21, frequently denotes distress.
23, 49, 10, 96, 16, 36, 31, is very pleasand in the vicinity of a saw-mill.

42. 48. 63. 85, is to survey. by 3, 83, 92, 6, 96, is where Jehn new Jene

83, 70, 68, is an adverb. 11, 19, 30, is the name of snimal whose head was worth about $40 in San when it was besieged.

My 88, 60, 50, 90, 72, is to move with haste. My 2, 74, 87, denotes merriment.

My whole is a verse with precepts stout, And a motto that is ever good, Which points the birth of quarrels out, That we may nip them in the bud.

Jynnville, Morgan Co., Ill. R. VASETAN

ENIGMA.

RITTEN FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST. I am composed of 23 letters.

My 12, 18, 9, 1, 11, is the name of a cou My 20, 3, 10, 12, 11, is what we all go for. My 22, 16, 12, 2, 6, 21, is a name dear to us. My 119, 15, 4, 14, 1, 3, 4, 3, is a county in Tenns

Mr S. 10. 5. 6. 7. is a stream of water My 17, 1, 18, 2, 19, 11, is a county in Indiana My whole is an old saying. 'H. ELDRIDGE.

CHARADE.

RITTEN FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST. My first the ladies often wear, To exclude the damp and chilly air; My second all she emakers use, In making boots, but not in shoes My whole in gardens oft is seen,

And when alive is ever green. So. Bend, Ind.

CHARADE.

WRITTEN FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST. My first is a place of refreshments, My second is a title, My third is often applied to gentlemen,

WRITTEN FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

Elba, Min.

It is required to find two different isosceles riangles such that their perimeters and areas shall be both expressed by the same numbers? Scott Co., Iowa. MORGAN STEVENS. An answer is requested.

WRITTEN FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST. There is a rectangular field whose breadth is 4-5 of its length. After laying out 1-5 of the whole ground for a garden it was found that there were 400 square yards left for mowing. Required—the length and breadth of the Ohio. T. C. PLEMING. An answer is requested.

CONUNDAUMS.

What proof have we that Cain did not kill his brother? Ans.-Because he was not Abel (abla).

What carpenter's tool represents a stingy nan's coachman? Ans,-A "screw"-dri-

What part of a river resembles pride? ins.-That which "goes before a fall."

What Roman General's name is a comto capture a lady? Ans,-Cuesar (seise

ANSWERS TO RIDDLES IN OUR LAST. MYTHOLOGICAL ENIGMA.—General Ulysses 8. Grant and the Army of the Cumberland. CHARADE.-Napoleon (Na-Po-Lea-On)! RID-DLE .- Evening.

Answer to PROBLEM by Morgan Stevens, published Dec 5th, 1863.—143.—Gill Bates, Francis W. Hibbard, Wallace Yost, Reuben Sarto, R. Vasey, Jr., and Morgan Steven

Answer to PROBLEM by A. Martin, published Dec. 5th, 1863.-10.815 inches.-Morgan Stevens, Gill Bates, and Reuben Barto.